ONE DIVISION OF TROOPS IN LIBYA

Official Statement Says Nation Acts on Own Initiative—No Agreement With British.

MOVE DESCRIBED AS
'FRIENDLY GESTURE'

Denies Definite Peace Proposals Were Made in Laval's Exchange With Mussolini.

By the Associated Press.
ROME, Oct. 24.—Italy tonight officially ordered the withdrawal of one division of troops from Libya, North Africa.

A government spokesman emphasized this action was taken independent of the action of any other nation.

Italy has no information regarding possible British naval withdrawals, the spokesman added. "Our actions have been taken on our own initiative," he said. "The Italian Government, however, considers its move in Libya as a peace gesture."

"Italy hopes the move will be interpreted as a friendly gesture," the spokesman said.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—The French Foreign Office said today Premier Laval failed to make any "definite proposals for peace" in an exchange of views with Premier Laval.

The Foreign Office also flatly denied that Laval had passed any hints suggesting for peace to the British Ambassador.

Denial by Foreign Office.
The Foreign Office issued a communique which read:

"According to news published in different papers, Premier Laval is supposed to have received from Mussolini suggestions for the settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict, suggestions which were reported to have been communicated this morning by the President of the council to Sir George Russell, the British Ambassador in Paris."

"In the conversations of Laval, there has never yet been a question of suggestions of this nature." Laval received British Ambassador Sir George Russell this morning, but there was no official announcement of what occurred. Laval was believed in some circles, however, to have asked Clerk whether London intends to withdraw several warships from the Mediterranean in return for Mussolini's withdrawal of a division from Libya.

Laval, in a talk before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, pledged France to seek only a compromise fully acceptable to the League.

Laval, who disclosed that Mussolini had agreed to his request to withdraw some troops from Libya, confronting Egypt, as a gesture to Britain, also told the French deputies he had warned Mussolini as early as last April against an invasion of Ethiopia.

A member of the Chamber's Foreign Affairs Committee said Laval, who had been accused by his opponents of promising Italy a free hand in Ethiopia, told the deputies that France would have to associate itself with sanctions against an aggressor state.

France and Britain "in Accord."
Deputies said Laval assured them France and Britain were "in complete accord" concerning League members' obligations "at any time in the future."

This statement was interpreted generally to mean that Britain told France it regarded the League Covenant as requiring assistance to France in the event the latter was a victim of an unprovoked aggression.

Laval told the committee French warships would steam immediately to the assistance of Britain if the latter's fleet was attacked by Italy, and that further assistance would be dispatched by land and air.

He said Mussolini's withdrawal of a troop division from Libya was a "friendly gesture" and that France would have to carry the men and materials.

The Ministry of the Navy announced, meanwhile, that certain French warships had left their bases for "training maneuvers." The cruisers Emile Bertin and Duquesne, five destroyers and 13 submarines left Brest. The cruisers Foch, Duplex and Tourville and seven submarines sailed from Toulon for "somewhere in the Mediterranean."

ONE KILLED, THREE HURT IN EXPLOSION
AT TRUNK FACTORY

Varnish Tank Blows Up at Herkert & Meisel Plant at Second and Madison Streets.

One man was killed and three injured when a varnish tank exploded because of too much air pressure at the Herkert & Meisel Trunk Co., on the southeast corner of Second and Madison streets at 1:20 p. m. today.

The man killed was George Gerardi, 40, foreman in the trunk department. He lived at 8567 Drury Lane, Baden, and was about 35 years old.

Those Injured.
The injured were all reported in a serious condition. They were John Kochansky, 35-year-old trunk maker, 1421 Montclair avenue; severe bruises.
Leroy Wilson, 32, Negro varnishier, 1906 Wash. street, burns on his left side and arm and numerous lacerations on the face.

James Boyd, 35, Negro porter, who lives in the 2000 block of Pine street, serious burns of the face and left arm and lacerations on the face.

The explosion occurred in one corner of a large second floor room used as a varnishing plant. One of the men was operating the varnish sprayer while the other three handled trunks. The varnish was forced out of the sprayer from the 30-gallon tank by an air compressor.

Police said the automatic control on the compressor failed to operate and the air kept pumping into the tank until it exceeded the safety point of 300 pounds per square inch, and the tank burst with a loud noise.

Fragments of metal were hurled through the room. Only the top of the tank remained unsplit. One of the men was crushed and his right arm broken by a flying chunk of metal. He was dead when picked up. Six windows in the room were shattered, and a number of trunks were smashed. The walls and floor were not damaged.

After being treated at City Hospital No. 1, Kochansky was taken to Missouri Pacific Hospital. Boyd and Wilson were given emergency treatment at City Hospital No. 2, then sent to St. Mary's Infirmary.

WOMEN IDENTIFY DAVIT AS KILLER
AT MURDER TRIAL

Paul Flueck's Widow and Daughter, Mrs. Davidson Point Him Out as Robber Who Shot Grocer.

BOTH IN TEARS ON WITNESS STAND

Dramatic Scene in Clayton Courtroom When Wife Insists Repeatedly "That Is the Man."

Bart Davit, on trial for murder in Circuit Judge Robert McElhinney's Court at Clayton, today was identified as the slayer of Paul Flueck, Maplewood grocer, in an attempted holdup more than three years ago.

In a dramatic identification Mrs. Fred E. Davidson, 7535 Weaver avenue, Maplewood, Flueck's daughter, and Mrs. Theresa Flueck, the widow, pointed out Davit as the man who shot Flueck in the attempted robbery. Cross-examination failed to shake the identification testimony of either witness. Both women wept on the witness stand, and Mrs. Davidson later fainted outside the courtroom.

Picks Out Defendant.
Asked by Prosecuting Attorney C. Arthur Anderson if the man she had described as the slayer was in the courtroom, Mrs. Davidson, who proceeded her mother on the stand, replied: "Yes sir, he is sitting there behind Mr. Lacy. As he spoke the witness looked squarely at Davit, who was seated behind his attorney, Verne Lacy. Davit stared at the witness."

"Those nervous looking eyes," Mrs. Davidson continued, her voice breaking. "I will never forget them. I am positive, Mr. Anderson." At this point the witness burst into tears and sobbed for several minutes before regaining her composure.

Before identifying the defendant Mrs. Davidson related that they were in her father's store at Berthold and Cartan avenues on the evening of Feb. 20, 1932, when a man came in holding a blue steel revolver.

"He said, 'This is a stick up; stick them up,' and added, 'I won't get no gun, don't get no gun.' William Hollingsworth, the clerk, dropped behind the counter. The man with the gun said, 'Get up from there.'"

"I had been trying to watch dad. The man stepped behind me and I saw dad's head above the counter. There was a shot, and my mother screamed, 'Oh my God, he shot dad.' I ran out screaming and praying to God to kill that man where he was."

In answer to Anderson's questions the witness said she had a "good look" at the murderer. "He wore a green slicker over a gray suit, a white and black muffer and a gray felt hat," she said. "I was only three feet away from him."

After following the murderer out of the store, Mrs. Davidson fainted on the sidewalk, she testified. Her husband then called a police officer, and she and other officers reached the scene a few minutes later and took Flueck to a hospital, where he died next day, Mrs. Davidson said.

Question of Height.

On cross-examination Mrs. Davidson testified that the slayer was 5 feet 8 or 9 inches tall and weighed about 140 pounds. Questioned about his height, the witness said the man was slightly taller than herself. In reply to further questions she said she was unable to say whether he was as tall as Lacy, and she stepped down from the witness stand and stood alongside the attorney. Her conclusion, following the test, was that the slayer, with his hat on, was taller than Lacy. Davit is shorter than Lacy.

Widow Testifies.

Mrs. Flueck, a large woman, wearing a tan coat over a dress of dark material, told the jury that she lives with her daughter and works "wherever a mother's care is needed."

Asked to relate what occurred the night of the shooting, Mrs. Flueck testified that her husband ran toward the rear of the store as the robber walked in, gun in hand.

"I pleaded with the man," the witness testified, "told him, 'Oh my God, please don't kill anyone. Take the money, take it all. You wouldn't kill anyone for a few lousy dollars?'"

Mrs. Flueck described the robber's clothing, green slicker, gray suit, felt hat, and added: "Oh, he was trembling. And his eyes, they were so wild when he looked at me. He saw me looking at him, and he put up the collar of his slicker coat."

The witness said her husband, Paul Flueck, was killed.

COMMISSIONER LIMBAUGH
BRANDS JONES PERJURER;
CALLS FOR PROSECUTIONMRS. MUENCH AGAIN
REFUSES TO ANSWER

Recalled to Stand, She Repeats That She Will Not Testify for Fear of Self-Incrimination.

Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, one of the respondents in the Anna Ware corpus suit, was recalled to the witness stand by Anna Ware's lawyer at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

It will be remembered that she was the first witness to be called to the stand when the hearing was begun Tuesday of last week. She refused, at that time, to answer the simple question whether a child had ever been born of her marriage on the ground her answer might incriminate her. Her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, made the same refusal when asked the same question.

Mrs. Muench refused to answer a question whether she knew Wilfred Jones, on the ground it might tend to incriminate her and "bring the wrath of the Post-Dispatch and Star-Times on innocent people," and also refused to answer any others of a series of prepared questions as to whether she knew any of the other respondents in the case, whether she had Anna Ware's baby, or whether she knew what had become of Anna Ware's baby.

Counsel for Anna Ware also expected to recall Dr. Ludwig O. Muench to the witness stand to ask this important question:

Who was the "doctor" in the Muench home at 4736 Westminister place on the night of Aug. 17-18, when the Muenches say a baby boy was born to his wife, Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench?

Dr. Muench, who last week followed the example of his wife and refused to answer the simple question whether a child had ever been born of their marriage, on the ground that his answer might incriminate him, was not in court at adjournment yesterday.

The basis for the obvious question to be put to Dr. Muench, concerning the identity of the mysterious "doctor," was laid by Dr. Muench's statement to the press last August that he was assisted in the birth by a physician whom he declined to name, and by the testimony yesterday of Wilfred Jones, Negro maid in the Muench home, a month ago Dr. Muench refused to name the "doctor" when summoned before Health Commissioner Bredek to substantiate the birth certificate he had filed.

As has been pointed out in the Post-Dispatch it seems to be within the power of the courts, in the case of witnesses who refuse to testify on the ground they might incriminate themselves, to compel some degree of substantiation of their claim, since the privilege of silence, if allowed to be based on unsupported statement, might frustrate the ends of justice.

SMOKE PALL OVER CITY

Motorists Turn on Lights and Trains Reach Station Late.

A heavy smoke pall covered most of the city this morning, making it necessary for early morning motorists to burn their headlights while driving in downtown districts. All trains were 10 to 15 minutes late in arriving at Union Station, having been required to proceed slowly through the yards because of the poor visibility of signals.

No fog was reported by the United States Weather Bureau, where it was said that smoke pall resulted from lack of sufficient winds to carry the smoke away.

EXPERT DECLARES BIRTH OF CHILD
TO MRS. MUENCH
VERY IMPROBABLE

Dr. Edgar F. Schmitz, Gynecologist, Testifies Women of 44 Do Have Babies, but Only Rarely in Such a Case.

Dr. Edgar F. Schmitz, specialist in gynecology and obstetrics, was called to the witness stand by Anna Ware's counsel this afternoon, in the Muench-Ware habeas corpus suit, and qualified as an expert. Questions were asked of him which bore on the claim of Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench that she had a baby Aug. 18, her 44th birthday having been in May.

Dr. Schmitz, asked whether a woman 44 years old could give birth to a child, replied that it was possible; such births were not rare, he said, with women who have had children previously, but for a woman who has been married for a considerable time, and has never had a child, a first motherhood at 44 is very rare.

Dr. Schmitz testified, in answer to questions, that determination of the question whether a woman has lately had a baby is possible in the first two weeks after birth, and increasingly difficult after that time; and that a blood test is not conclusive as a means of determining parentage.

A Most Interesting Witness.
One of the most interesting witnesses of today's session was Mrs. J. R. Plummer of Minneapolis, the similarity of whose name to that of "Mrs. J. R. Palmer," named by Wilfred Jones in his account of the baby case as the present foster mother of the Ware baby, immediately commanded the attention of the courtroom.

Mrs. Plummer's testimony had not gone far before the purpose of Anna Ware's counsel in putting her on the stand was apparent—to show that Jones "clients," first designated by him as "Mr. and Mrs. X," and later as "Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Palmer," were phantoms in the great Muench baby hoax, created by the skillful Jones in the image of Mr. and Mrs. Plummer.

"Possible, But Improbable."
Asked whether a woman 44 years old, married 23 years without having had a child, could have one, Dr. Schmitz said, "It is possible, but highly improbable." He was asked as to difficulty of delivery in such a case, and said this difficulty normally increased with age.

When the hypothetical case of an infant born six weeks prematurely, and weighing 6½ pounds, was presented, the physician said the weight named was within the range of normal weight for a full-term baby.

During Dr. Schmitz's testimony Mrs. Muench whispered to her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, and wrote notes to her lawyer.

Hypothetical Questions.
Dr. Schmitz was asked to give his opinion of the proper treatment and care of the hypothetical expectant mother, 44 years old, who had never borne a child.

"The first thing I would suggest," he answered, "would be hospitalization. I would not care to undertake delivery in the home—there are too many things that might happen. Of course, in a hospital, all the routine would be taken care of. And surely, the woman ought to have all the advantages of prenatal care."

Text of Application for Order
To Muenches to Bring in Baby

THE substance of the application to the Court by Anna Ware's counsel for an order that the child now in the Muench home be produced in Court, follows, with certain legalistic phrases omitted:

"The petitioner respectfully represents to the Court that the issues joined in this case involve the identity of a certain male child, two or three months of age, shown by the evidence now to be in the custody and control of Dr. Ludwig O. Muench and Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, at their home at 4736 Westminister place, and that the evidence has shown that said respondents now have but one male child of about said age in their custody and control at said address or elsewhere; that the issues have heretofore arisen and will hereinafter arise in the trial regarding the physical appearance and characteristics of said child, including, among other things, the question of its apparent age, its size and development, the color of its hair, and the presence of an infection or irritation of its scalp, and the presence of scratches, scars, or birthmarks on and about its person."

JONES AND COUNSEL CONFER WITH CIRCUIT ATTORNEY'S AID

McLaughlin Says He Is Not Going to Act Till Close of Today's Hearing.

Wilfred Jones and his attorney, Shepard R. Evans, sat in a 15-minute conference with Assistant Circuit Attorney James E. McLaughlin in the record room of the St. Louis Court of Appeals beginning at 2:10 o'clock this afternoon. At its conclusion Jones entered the courtroom, outside which three city detectives, posted by order of McLaughlin, were sitting.

After the conference, McLaughlin said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that Jones had not indicated what he meant to do about his previous testimony, concerning which Commissioner Limbaugh had said that he "has been guilty of perjury of the most flagrant character."

Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller, after conferring with McLaughlin, told reporters that McLaughlin had

STERN STATEMENT
BY COMMISSIONER

Tells Circuit Attorney's Grand Jury Assistant That Jones Also Is Guilty of Contempt But Punishment for That Offense Is "Insignificant."

Wilfred Jones "has been guilty of perjury of the most flagrant character," Special Commissioner Rush H. Limbaugh declared in a dramatic announcement from the bench today in the Anna Ware habeas corpus suit. The Commissioner directed attention of the Circuit Attorney to the situation "to determine whether or not Mr. Jones should be indicted and proceeded against according to law."

Before delivering his stern denunciation of Jones, respondent and witness in the habeas corpus action, the Commissioner called before him Assistant Circuit Attorney James E. McLaughlin, who was in court watching proceedings. It was to McLaughlin that his remarks were made.

Jones sat apparently thunderstruck, at the summary action, Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench dropped her joviality like a veil, her mouth fell open, she bit her fingernails and dabbed her eyes with her handkerchief.

Call for Prosecutor.

A recess had just ended, and the Commissioner had taken his seat, at 12:20 o'clock, when counsel for one of the respondents asked a question, preparatory to the resumption of testimony.

"I have a statement to make first on my own motion," said Commissioner Limbaugh in impressive tones. "Is Mr. McLaughlin of the Circuit Attorney's office here?"

"Yes, Mr. Commissioner," McLaughlin replied. He walked toward the bench from the chair from which he had been observing the morning's proceedings.

Slowly and impressively, looking down frequently as though reading from notes, the Commissioner addressed McLaughlin.

Commissioner's Statement.

"Mr. Assistant Circuit Attorney," he said, "I have a statement that I desire to make. I feel it my duty as Commissioner of this Court, to call to your attention the testimony and conduct of Wilfred Jones, in the cause now pending before me."

"Mr. Jones is a respondent in this cause, and as such respondent has filed the usual sworn return to the Court's writ of habeas corpus, and has testified as a witness before me in the cause. Having heard Mr. Jones testify under oath, and having heard the testimony of numerous other witnesses under oath, and having before me Mr. Jones' sworn return in this cause, I am convinced that he has committed perjury of the most flagrant character."

FORMER ASSISTANT CHIEF OF POLICE GILLASPY DIES

Fractured Hip at Home in Columbia Recently; Was 81 Years

Christopher G. Gillaspay, former assistant chief of the St. Louis Police Department, died last night at his home in Columbia, Mo., of complications resulting from a fractured hip, suffered three weeks ago in his home at Columbia.

Mr. Gillaspay, 81 years old, spent his boyhood in Columbia. He joined the St. Louis police force in 1878 as a patrolman, and after working his way up to the ranks of Sergeant and Captain, he was appointed Assistant Chief of Police in 1901. He retained his position until 1921, when he retired and returned to Columbia to make his home there. During his early years on the police force, Mr. Gillaspay rode a mounted beat on western Easton avenue, where frequenters of roadhouses often gave the police trouble.

Surviving are his wife, a son and two daughters. Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at Columbia.

Commissioner Declares Jones Committed Perjury

cause pending before me, I am convinced that Mr. Jones has been guilty of perjury of the most flagrant character.

"While it is true that he is guilty of contempt of court, the punishment for contempt of court is so insignificant, as compared with the punishment described by law for the commission of wilful perjury, that I am calling this matter to your attention, so that you and your superior officer, the Circuit Attorney of St. Louis, may immediately make such investigation and take such steps as you may deem proper, to determine whether or not Mr. Jones should be indicted and proceeded against according to law.

"You may rest assured that in any action you may decide to take, you shall have my full co-operation as an officer of the court, to the end that the processes of justice may not be thwarted, and that respect for the ordinary procedure of our courts may be maintained."

There was a breathless pause as the Commissioner finished. Assistant Circuit Attorney McLaughlin, who is in charge of the grand jury, bowed, and replied:

"If Your Honor please, at your suggestion, and obeying the ruling of the Court, I will take such action as you suggest."

"You may proceed," the Commissioner said to counsel.

Jones Seems Astonished.

Jones attired in a dark suit, was seated in the large group at the counsel table when the Commissioner made his statement to McLaughlin. He leaned forward, as if to hear better, when Limbaugh began speaking. As the Commissioner continued, making his point clear, Jones, seemingly astonished, sat back, his lanky frame upright in the chair. His eyes blinked. He did not move or speak thereafter during the discourse. His chair was behind those occupied by Mrs. Muench and her lawyer, Edgar J. Keating. A short distance in front of him and to one side was Dr. Muench. When the luncheon recess was ordered, Jones was the subject of general attention. He remained at the counsel table a few minutes, looking over some papers, then went out into the ante-room and out of the building. Detectives had been waiting there for some time, but none of them accosted Jones.

The penalty provided by the statutes for perjury, in such cases as the present one, is imprisonment in the penitentiary for not more than seven years. No penitentiary sentence is for less than two years.

Ready to Ask for Order to Bring in Baby in Muench Home.

Another important development today was the announcement by Anna Ware's counsel that at the conclusion of her case he would ask for a court order directing the production in court of the baby now in the Muench home.

Anna's attorney served notice that he would ask for such an order by presenting a copy of his application to counsel for the Muenches during a recess.

Anna, who charges that her baby is the one now in the home of the Muenches, being "palmed off" as their own, stated in the application to be filed by her attorney that the evidence adduced so far in the hearing showed that there was but one child in the Muench home and the issues have been joined to involve its identity.

Need for Child's Presence.

Issues have arisen, the application continued, concerning the physical appearance, size and development, of the child in the Muench home, the color of his hair, and the existence of a scalp of an irritant or infection. These questions will continue to arise during the course of the hearing, the application stated.

Production of the baby in court, the application stated, would serve the interests, not only of Anna and the child, but of "the State of Missouri which has an interest in the present and future welfare of the child."

The application asked the Commissioner to order that the baby be brought into court at some convenient time to be held there for examination and identification by the Commissioner and the parties to the litigation and their witnesses.

Servants in the Muench household who testified yesterday were asked specifically if the child was at the Muench home on that day. They responded that it was.

Expert Declares Muench Birth Story Highly Improbable

clinical matters through which Anna's attorney sought to show that the treatment given to Mrs. Muench immediately after she said she had a baby was not in accordance with Dr. Schmitz' ideas of the proper procedure.

"Assume that you have a baby that weighed 6 1/2 to 6 3/4 pounds at birth (the announced weight of the Muench baby) and that it had no food or water for three or four days (the Muench nurse testified that baby did not, what do you think would be the proper treatment?" the attorney asked.

"I think that baby would be dead," the physician responded.

Question on Feeding.

"And if for the next week the baby was fed with a medical dropper a mixture containing four parts of water, one part of canned milk, and a teaspoonful of corn syrup?"

"I don't think you would have a chance to give that to the child, I think the baby would be dead," Dr. Schmitz replied.

The mixture sounds weak to me," the expert added. "The whole feeding process is a very ticklish one. The mechanism of the premature baby is not as well fitted to take up life as that of the full-term baby. Premature babies do not thrive on artificial feedings."

"Mother's milk is the best, and can be obtained from hospitals and wet nurses." Not only in the matter of food, but in their entire care, Dr. Schmitz added, premature babies present unusual difficulties.

The Proper Nourishment.

Commissioner Limbaugh inquired, when Barker had finished, how soon after the birth of the hypothetical infant nourishment should begin.

"I would begin within a few hours after birth with a little mother's milk," the physician answered.

"How often should the baby be fed?" "I would like to start off every hour or hour and a half, and see how that worked and then regulate it further."

The baby, Dr. Schmitz said in response to another question of the Commissioner, should be carefully wrapped in warm, soft material, with the head hooded, and only the face exposed. In the home, he said, it should have an improvised incubator, with hot water bottles or electric pads supplying heat to keep it at a temperature of 80 to 85 degrees, perhaps higher.

scales at first used in weighing the baby, and the weight shown on them was the same as at first, 6 1/2 pounds. She mentioned apparent indications of premature birth, including very thin fingernails. Dr. Marsh Pitzman, former friend of the Muenches, has testified that the fingernails were long, and were cut. "Perhaps he cut them," she said, when told of this. "I didn't."

She declared she had never seen any pimples on the baby's scalp, mentioned in Dr. Pitzman's testimony, and said she had never applied dye or "anything except olive oil" to the baby's hair.

REVENUE EXCEEDING ESTIMATE IN BUDGET, SAYS MORGENTHAU

First-Quarter Increase 8.3 Per Cent. Last Year, Excluding Processing Taxes, He Reports.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said today that Government income was running well ahead of budgetary estimates for the first three months of the present fiscal year.

All revenues, including the disputed processing tax, he said, had been estimated at $653,000,000 for the first quarter, ending with September. Actually, he said, revenue amounted to $685,000,000, an increase of $32,000,000, or approximately 4.9 per cent, of processing taxes has been impounded by the courts pending determination of the constitutionality of the levy.

Morgenthau said receipts during the three-month period, exclusive of the processing tax, amounted to $604,615,000, compared to $681,000,000 in the same period last year, a gain of 18 per cent.

JEALOUS ADMIRER EJECTED FOR TALK WITH WOMAN JUROR

She Told Court He Demanded to Know What Man Next to Her in Box Said to Her.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 24.—Judge Frank P. Patterson of Common Pleas Court called a jury into his chambers yesterday after hearing a complaint that a man had been talking with a young woman juror.

The young woman asked to speak privately with Judge Patterson. He reported she said, "It's this way. This man, boy friend of a very jealous woman, came in and saw me talk with the man next to me in the jury box. He demands to know what we talked about."

Judge Patterson called in the young man and asked him to stay out of the courtroom or go to jail. He left.

MOVE TO DISMISS CUSTODIANS OF IMPOUNDED FIRE PREMIUMS

Insurance Supervisor's Motion Applies Also to Officers in 10 Per Cent Restitution Case.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 24.—Dismissal of the Commissioners and custodians in the 10 per cent fire insurance restitution case, was sought in a motion filed yesterday in Cole County Circuit Court by attorneys for the State Insurance Department.

H. P. Lauf and L. H. Cook, Jefferson City lawyers, were appointed Commissioners last December by Circuit Judge Nike G. Sevier to handle the funds impounded in the 13-year litigation, and to attempt to find policyholders who have not yet received refunds.

In the new action, R. Emmet O'Malley, State Superintendent of Insurance, also asks that the order authorizing the appointment of Gilbert Lamb, a former Assistant Attorney-General, as counsel for the Commissioners and custodians, be set aside, and that he be paid a "reasonable fee." Lauf and Cook have been drawing $1000 a month, the motion stated, and Lamb has been receiving $600 a month.

Expenses of paying the Commissioners and custodians, their stenographers and clerks and other assistants, as well as other costs, has totaled $33,501, O'Malley said in the motion.

He also asked that the $1,660,000 in impounded funds which have not been refunded to policyholders be deposited in a bank where it would bear interest. At present it is receiving no interest in the Central Missouri Trust Co. here.

CONFESSED HOLDUP MURDERER HANGED AT SAN QUENTIN, CAL.

His Sister, Mrs. Martha Miller, of St. Louis Makes Van Plea for John C. Hawkins.

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Oct. 24.—John C. Hawkins of Los Angeles was hanged at the prison here at 10:31 a. m. today for the murder of E. McCord in a holdup, Sept. 7, 1934. Hawkins had pleaded guilty.

Mrs. Martha Miller of St. Louis, Hawkins' sister, attempted to see Warden James E. Holahan before her brother was led to the gallows. She had made a futile appeal to Gov. Frank F. Merriam for a reprieve.

Hawkins wrote several letters in his cell last night, slept well and ate a good breakfast.

St. Louisan Kills Deer.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 24.—Game Warden Vernon Bennett said the first deer to be killed this season in Taney County was shot by John Powell of St. Louis, at 7:45 a. m. today.

Letters From Mrs. Thomason.

Asked if she had with her any letters she had received from Mrs. Thomason, she said she had, and produced two, which were introduced in evidence. One letter, which she said she had received Feb. 19, before moving from St. Louis, was mailed in New York. It began, "Dear Mrs. Plummer," and was signed "Jean Tremayne," a name sometimes used by Mrs. Thomason.

The writer of the letter, who from the text was apparently replying to a request for delinquent payments for the care of the child of Mrs. Thomason, said in the letter that she had written Jones, who had assured her the delinquent amount would be paid.

The other letter, opening "My Dear Sweetheart," and signed "Mother," was apparently directed to the child in the Plummer home. It included injunctions that she attend school faithfully, study hard, and be sure to go to Sunday school.

Both letters were read in court. "Did Jones pay all of the agreed cost of the board?" Attorney Barker asked. Mrs. Plummer replied:

"I had the child, until April

MAID DESCRIBES SCENE IN MUENCH HOME ON NIGHT BABY ARRIVED

She Was Not There at Time But Believed Announcement, "Mrs. Muench Just Had a Baby"

Only Others Present in House Were Strange "Doctor" and Helen Berroyer, Negro Servant Testifies.

Willie Mary Cobb, Negro maid in the Muench home since June 19, was the curtain-raiser in the St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday for the Muench response to Anna Ware's allegation that her baby boy is the one being "palmed off" as the Muenches' own.

The scene revealed in the Muench home at 4736 Westminister place on the night of Aug. 17-18 by the maid's testimony presented the following dramatic scene:

Dr. Ludwig O. Muench. His wife, Nellie Tipton Muench. The faithful Helen Berroyer, 5553 Pershing avenue, stenographer, and friend, whose services, according to testimony, were lent to the Muenches in the Price baby episode, a preliminary phase of the baby case.

A strange man, referred to as "Doctor" by Muench, never seen before or since by the witness.

These were the only persons in the Muench home at the great moment when, after 22 years of married life unblemished by motherhood, the 44-year-old Mrs. Muench announced the birth of a child on the eve of another great crisis in the lives of the Muenches, her trial on the charge of kidnapping Dr. I. D. Kelley for ransom, of which she was acquitted.

Met at Door With the News. The witness herself was not present—she had spent her usual Saturday night out at a movie, and returned to the Muench home about 1 a. m. Sunday, Aug. 18—but she believed it when met at the door by the smiling Dr. Muench with the glad tidings, "Mary, Mrs. Muench has just had her baby."

The maid's interesting narrative of what transpired in the Muench home on that eventful night was the first "inside" story of the scene there to be presented in court because both Dr. and Mrs. Muench, when called to testify, refused, on the ground that they might incriminate themselves, to answer the simple question of whether a child had ever been born of their marriage.

Highlights of Testimony. Among the highlights of her testimony were statements that:

She never saw the Price baby, newborn son of an unwed mother, which, according to the testimony, was in the Muench home on July 10 and 11 and was taken from there by Wilfred Jones and Mrs. Berroyer to Jewish Hospital, where it died July 15.

She knew of no doctor who attended Mrs. Muench, except for the strange man who was there on the night of the reported birth.

She saw Dr. Marsh Pitzman, Mrs. Muench's good friend until he became convinced that her baby story was a hoax, depart from the Muench home with the missing X-ray picture which would prove or disprove Mrs. Muench's story that she had a baby.

Mrs. Muench spoke playfully of the baby in her home in such terms as "little fat pig on a lard bucket," "little hog on a log" and "Pudgy."

Willie Mary, who appeared on the witness stand in a green and brown

Didn't See Stork—Heard About It

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

WILLIE MARY COBB. WHO testified yesterday that she arrived at the Muench home at 1 a. m. Sunday, Aug. 18, and was met at the door by Dr. Muench with the news that Mrs. Muench had just had her baby.

Mrs. Muench's bedroom when she was told to, but could not say exactly how long a time elapsed before she was told to. She spoke of "the nurse" as helping her, and said this was Oleeta Lewis, who arrived several hours after she did.

"What did you hear Mrs. Muench say?" "She was asking where was her baby."

"Are you sure Dr. Muench was there?" "Sure he was there."

"And the other doctor—you never heard his name mentioned in all the talk?" "No, I never."

The witness testified that Mrs. Muench was in bed two weeks after Aug. 18.

On the first day of the third week, Sept. 2, Mrs. Muench motored with her husband to Mexico, Mo. for a hearing on the setting of her kidnapping trial, sat in on a three hour conference of her counsel, and demonstrated her usual agility in eluding photographers.

Color of the Baby's Hair. Asked if she had ever seen anything put on the baby's head, a reference to previous testimony indicating the possibility the baby's hair may have been dyed, she laughed loudly and said: "No, I didn't."

"What color is the baby's hair?" "Just like Mrs. Muench's."

Mrs. Berroyer visited the Muench home two or three times a week, the maid testified. Wilfred Jones, she said, also visited there, but she could not say how often.

"Do you know Dr. Pitzman?" "I did," the maid replied, accenting the "did."

"Did he question you?" "He questioned me down, if that's what you want to know. He questioned me behind her back all the time."

Asked if she had ever seen the maid was asked what time Mrs. Berroyer arrived at the Muench home on the night Mrs. Muench says she had a baby, and how she was dressed. The witness said she could not answer either question.

Asked whether Mrs. Muench had nursed the baby she said it was impossible for her to do so.

Returning to the missing X-ray picture, Anna's counsel asked when the witness had first seen it. She said it was on July 12 and said she was able to fix that date because she had planned to attend a picnic, but had to stay home.

"Do you see Dr. Pitzman taking the film?" "No, I'm not accusing him of anything. I only tell what I saw. He took it off the piano, rolled it up, put it in his pocket and went out the front door."

When Dr. Pitzman questioned her about where she was on the night of the reported birth, the witness said, she did not answer, but turned and walked away from him. Questioned again concerning whether the baby had a birthmark, the witness said there was a red spot on one eye, the right one, she thought.

Questions by Commissioner. Anna's counsel said he had no more questions, but Commissioner Limbaugh put some to the witness.

In response to these inquiries the maid testified that she had left the Muench home about 8 o'clock on the (Saturday) night of Aug. 17, to go to a moving picture show; that Mrs. Muench was upstairs in bed at that time; and that the witness did not expect a baby to be born that night because Mrs. Muench had told her it would be about Sept. 27.

"You say the baby looks like Mrs. Muench?" the Commissioner asked. "Yes."

"Does it look at all like Dr. Muench?" "I don't know—it just looks like Mrs. Muench."

"What do they call it?" "Just a baby."

"Yes, but what name?" "Sometimes they call it Ernest," said the witness. The baby's name was given in the birth certificate as Ernest Ludwig Muench. The first name is that of Mrs. Muench's brother, Supreme Court Judge Ernest Tipton; the second name is that of Dr. Muench.

The Commissioner's final question, a reference to the witness' belligerent attitude in answering questions put to her by Barker, was whether she was mad at Mr. Barker. She said she was not.

Counsel for Mrs. Muench then took up the subject of the names by which the baby is called.

"Did you ever hear it called 'Pudgy'?" he asked. The witness laughed and said she had heard that.

"Did you ever hear it called 'little pig in a lard bucket'?" Again the witness laughed and she responded, "Oh, yes, that's its nickname." Another version of this nickname, the witness said, was "little hog on a log."

Asked if Mrs. Muench was affectionate toward the baby, the witness answered, "Oh, yes, very affectionate. She's just crazy about it."

Mrs. Muench put her handkerchief to her eyes at this point, which ended the examination.

LAWYERS' SALE OF OPINIONS FOR PROPAGANDA DENOUNCED

Senators Declare Bar Should Quit Hunting "Shysters" and Go After Big Fellows.

By the Associated Press. SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 24.—Washington's two United States Senators, both lawyers, advocated today that the American Bar Association quit disciplining the so-called "shyster" and act against "the leading and presumably most respectable law firms in the country."

Senators B. Schwellenbach and Homer T. Bone, both Democrats, expressed their opinions in an interview on their experiences on senatorial investigating committees. Schwellenbach is a member of the Lobby Investigating Committee and Bone of the Munitions Committee.

"Probably the most outstanding revelation before the Senate Committee investigating lobbying," Schwellenbach said, "was the fact that for fees ranging between $25,000 and $75,000 a piece, the leading law firms of the country sold opinions to the power companies to the effect that the Wheeler-Rayburn (anti-holding company) bill was unconstitutional. These opinions were to be used exclusively for propaganda purposes."

Senator Bone commented: "The Bar Association is straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel."

TWO BURNED IN EXPLOSION AT FISHER BODY PLANT

One Suffers Broken Ankle When Spark Sets Off Finishing Compound.

Two men suffered minor burns today when a spark from a welding machine at the Fisher Body Co. Arlington and Nature Bridge avenues, caused an explosion in a drum which had contained a finishing compound. A small fire broke out on the loading platform but was extinguished before the arrival of firemen.

Emmet Stevens, a maintenance man, of 3308 Shenandoah avenue, suffered a fracture of the right ankle and was burned on the leg. Charles Steigemeier, a foreman, of 4524 Pope avenue, was burned on the hands. A wire guard about a transformer was being welded when the accident occurred.

Firemen were called to the plant yesterday afternoon when an explosion occurred in a metal can containing rubber bumpers and again last night when a small fire broke out on the roof of the loading platform.

NEW STORM STRIKES CUBA: CENTER NORTH OF JAMAICA

Another Disturbance Is Reported 300 Miles Northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

HAVANA, Oct. 24.—A new storm hit Cuba today, following a hurricane which struck the eastern part of the island and took one life earlier in the week.

Havana felt the latest blow. An advisory warning from the national observatory early today said the center of the disturbance was 100 miles northwest of Point Negril, Jamaica, and moving north-northwest. If the storm intensifies, said the observatory, it will endanger the western half of Cuba.

Another disturbance was reported 300 miles northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico. The wind velocity had reached 41 miles an hour.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Oct. 24.—Heavy destruction to the west coast of Haiti in the Caribbean hurricane was reported yesterday by the Canadian National steamship Cavalier on its arrival here from Port-au-Prince. Steaming down the west coast of the West Indian Republic Tuesday, the ship passed a great number of trees and carcasses of cattle, horses, mules and small stock floating in the sea.

PAIR SHOT TO DEATH, AUTO IS WRECKED NEAR DETROIT

State Police Think Man Fired Pistol With Car Traveling at High Speed.

By the Associated Press. DETROIT, Oct. 24.—Corp. Frank Walker of the State police said the bodies of a man and woman found shot to death today in a wrecked motor car southwest of here were those of William Pinkert, 23 years old, and Mrs. L. L. Gordon, both of Wyandotte, Mich.

Walker said he thought Pinkert shot Mrs. Gordon, the wife of a railroad conductor, and then fired a bullet into his head while the car was traveling at high speed. A .38-caliber revolver was found at Pinkert's feet, and a note was found in a purse beside Mrs. Gordon's body, indicating possibility the tragedy was the result of a suicide agreement, Walker said.

ARRIVED

MAN TURNS DETECTIVE, CLEARS HIMSELF OF LARCENY CHARGE

Finds Suspect From Whom He Got Stolen Handbag as Security, Has Him Arrested.

Joseph Burke, a tinner, residing at Riverview Gardens, did his own detective work and cleared himself today of a charge of grand larceny, placed against him last Oct. 14, when police arrested him with a handbag that had been stolen from the automobile of James Winesberg, a liquor salesman, staying at Hotel Lennox.

John Kreutz, 5502A Idaho avenue, was arrested and charged with grand larceny for theft of the bag, when the warrant against Burke was dismissed in Judge Joseph F. Dickmann's Court of Criminal Correction. Kreutz told police he did not steal the bag, but was with a Negro who did.

Burke got the bag from Kreutz in a saloon near Eighth and Carr streets as security for a 50-cent loan, he said, believing it belonged to Kreutz, who Burke could not find after he was arrested. He continued his search, however, visiting all the places he learned Kreutz frequented, and yesterday found him at Broadway and Carr streets. Kreutz asked him, "Did you get out of it all right?" "Sure," Burke replied, following Kreutz unobserved until he found a policeman, who arrested Kreutz.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 24.—Abe Shushan was acquitted last night of Federal charges of income tax evasion.

Shushan, a political associate of the late Senator Huey P. Long, was charged with evading payment of $71,153 in taxes on an unreported gross income of $448,218 for the years 1929-1933.

The Government alleged he received large amounts as rebates from a construction company holding contracts with the Orleans Levee Board, of which Shushan was president. The defense countered with testimony that the money was contributed, through Shushan, to Long's campaign fund.

State Representative Joseph Fisher, another associate of Long, was convicted of income tax evasion at an earlier trial and is now serving an 18 months' sentence in Atlanta penitentiary. There are similar charges against Seymour Weiss, treasurer of the late Senator Long's organization; State Senator Jules Fisher, uncle of the convicted Representative, and the Nelson Brothers, contractors, who did work during Long's $75,000,000 road building program.

Disorder in Courtroom.

As the court clerk read the Shushan verdict, cheers rose from the packed courtroom. Friends rushed to Shushan's side to offer congratulations.

Bailiffs rapped for order and Judge William H. Barrett discharged the jury. Just before the Judge left the bench Shushan rose from his seat and asked that no pictures be taken in the courtroom.

As Judge Barrett went through a side door leading to his chambers, a photographer snapped a flashlight picture of Shushan.

Several persons, some who were known as bodyguards of the late Senator Long, rushed for the photographer, shouting "Get him," and "We'll break your neck."

Six bailiffs tried in vain to restore order. The shouting bodyguards were restrained for a few minutes by a cluster of men who grabbed them by both arms, while Defense Counsel Hugh M. Wilkinson pleaded with them to be seated.

The crowd quickly gathered about the bodyguards and it required several minutes for court officers to clear the room.

While the courtroom was in turmoil, William McClymont, photographer for the New Orleans Item-Tribune, was knocked down in a corridor of the building. He said he did not take any pictures in the courtroom.

A former Long bodyguard who was attending the trial as a spectator grabbed for a camera in the hands of Leon Trice, Associated Press photographer, and damaged it. Trice had not taken a picture.

Another photographer, H. S. Williams, was struck on the head from behind as he waited in a corridor for Shushan to leave the building.

Judge Barrett said after the disorder he had issued no order that would prevent the taking of pictures in the courtroom.

Verdict in Four Hours.
The jury of 11 white men and a

Negro received the case at 4:25 p. m. and returned the verdict four hours and five minutes later.

Hugh Wilkinson, Shushan's attorney, issued the following statement:

"We think the verdict of the jury vindicated the general feeling in New Orleans that these income tax prosecutions have been nothing less than political persecutions and the verdict of this jury, we hope, will bring to an end the unrest that has been caused by these investigations in Louisiana."

Wilkinson unsuccessfully defended State Representative Fisher at his trial several months ago.

District Attorney Rebe Viosca said the Government still could take civil action against Shushan through an assessment by the Treasury Department.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
FIRES UNDER CONTROL

Heavy Damage Near Los Angeles From Blazes Fanned by High Winds.

By the Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 24.—All forest and brush fires in Southern California were checked temporarily today. Property damage was estimated at $6,000,000.

Although 1400 fire fighters remained on duty in the Malibu Beach area threatened by the flames during the night. A crosswind turned the fire toward the sea.

Reports from the Altadena-Arroyo Seco area said about 15 residences had been destroyed. Many crews were still at work pumping water on small fires.

Traffic on six State highways was blocked in places today by drifted sand, uprooted trees and firefighting equipment. Linemen were restoring service to more than 1000 telephones disconnected by a gale that reached a velocity of 50 miles an hour in some sections.

Damage to agricultural crops and property from the wind alone was estimated at $3,000,000. Most of this was to citrus crops in Riverside and Orange counties, and in the San Fernando section of Los Angeles County.

The mountain home of Charles Farrell, film star, was destroyed, as well as that of Lionel Atwill, another actor.

PERMIT FOR NEWSPAPER PLANT

East St. Louis Journal to Build $90,000 Establishment.

The East St. Louis Journal received a permit yesterday to construct a two-story newspaper plant at 425-429 Missouri avenue. The building was designed by Charles Harris, architect of Decatur, and will be erected for $90,000 by the Wimmer Construction Co. of St. Louis.

The structure will be 65 by 116 feet. The presses will be in the basement and the paper's advertising offices on the first floor. Part of the floor will be leased to the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. for its business office. The composing room, editorial rooms, library and rest room will be on the second floor. The East St. Louis Journal is owned by the East Shore Newspapers, Inc., headed by F. W. Schaub of Decatur.

SHOT TO DEATH IN DICE GAME
ARGUMENT OVER FIVE CENTS

Charles Jackson, Negro, Victim of Fight With Jesse Avery.

Charles Jackson, a 32-year-old Negro, was shot and killed last night by Jesse Avery, 29, an independent Negro car washer, at the police parking lot next to headquarters, in an argument over five cents during a dice game at 2142 Walnut street.

Avery, who shot Jackson in the back and side, told police he went to his home nearby and got his revolver after Jackson cut him during the argument.

CORK FIRM INCREASES WAGES

Minimum of Lancaster, Pa., Company More Than in 1929.

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 24.—Wage increases for approximately 6000 employees and an unemployment benefit plan for 1936 are announced by H. W. Prentiss Jr., president of the Armstrong Cork Co.

Hourly wages to workers in domestic factories and branch warehouses will be increased 5 per cent Nov. 3, and Dec. 24 the company will disburse to salaried workers a payment equal to 5 per cent of each employee's 1935 compensation.

With the increase, Prentiss said, the minimum rate for men will be 46 cents an hour, which is 15 per cent above the 1929 minimum, and women will receive a minimum of 33 cents an hour, 15 per cent more than the 1929 minimum and 10.5 per cent more than the average 1929 hourly rate.

NEW YORK CITY OFFICIAL ACCUSED OF JOB FIXING

Joseph A. Ruddy, Noted Swimmer, Examiner for City Civil Service Board, Removed After Inquiry.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Joseph A. Ruddy, noted swimmer, was suspended yesterday as physical examiner for the municipal Civil Service Commission, a post he had held since 1903.

His suspension resulted from an investigation of the city "job fixing racket" conducted by Paul Blanshard, Commissioner of Accounts. Thirteen alleged fixers have been convicted or indicted, Blanshard said.

Blanshard said he found that Ruddy had made bank deposits of $104,006 between Nov. 2, 1931, and Dec. 31, 1934. He rejected Ruddy's explanation $88,155 represented race track winnings over a three-year period.

Ruddy's suspension followed the arrest of Richard Lundy, on a charge of suspicion of grand larceny. Lundy was charged with accepting $300 from Harry Neville of Brooklyn, on a promise of obtaining Neville an appointment in the fire department. Lundy was held in $15,000 bail. Lundy denied he had paid any of the money to Ruddy, although Blanshard charged that Lundy had taken Neville and other prospective appointees to the New York Athletic Club, of which Ruddy is a Governor, and there introduced them to Ruddy, asking the latter to "fix them up."

Ruddy, who received the Congressional medal for heroism and valor for one of his rescues of drowning persons, has won 800 prizes in swimming and water polo, including two Olympic awards.

TWO-INCH PIN REMOVED FROM YOUTH'S STOMACH

Operation on Granite City Boy Who Swallowed Article He Put in Pea-Shooter.

A two-inch corkscrew pin which he swallowed while attempting to blow it through a pea-shooter was removed yesterday from the stomach of Roger Bowler, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Bowler, 2030 State street, Granite City. The operation was performed at St. Elizabeth's Hospital there.

Bowler, a high school student, inhaled sharply while trying to blow the pin through the pea-shooter and drew the pin into his throat. X-ray tests indicated the pin had entered the stomach. Bowler is recuperating at the hospital.

BOARD OF HEALTH DEFERS INQUIRY ON DR. MUENCH'S CASE

Decides Not to Take Up Question of Birth Certificate Till Habeas Corpus Hearings End.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 24.—The Missouri State Board of Health decided last night to defer an official investigation of the Muench baby hoax in St. Louis and the execution of a certificate by Dr. Ludwig O. Muench reporting the birth of a baby boy to his wife, Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, at their home in St. Louis last Aug. 18.

The board devoted about 10 minutes of a four-hour session to discussion of the case, and decided to wait on completion of the habeas corpus proceeding now in progress in the St. Louis Court of Appeals by which Anna Ware, unmarried mother, seeks to regain custody of her baby boy, alleged to be in the possession of the Muenchs.

Statement by the Board.

Following the meeting, which was an executive one, the board issued the following statement: "The matter of the birth certificate executed by Dr. Muench was considered by the board and no action taken, in view of the pending of the proceeding of the St. Louis Court of Appeals."

Dr. T. S. Bourke of Kansas City, president of the board, said the case was discussed by the board about 10 minutes. The meeting was the regular October session of the board preliminary to the fall examination of applicants for licenses to practice medicine.

Dr. Bourke was asked if the board considered whether it could proceed independently of the habeas corpus suit on the official report by Dr. Joseph F. Bredeck, City Health Commissioner of St. Louis, on Dr. Bredeck's recent demand on Dr. Muench for substantiation of the birth certificate.

Dr. Bourke said Dr. Bredeck's report, filed Oct. 2, was not gone into by the board. He said he was not prepared to comment on whether the board could order an investigation based on the official report by Dr. Bredeck, irrespective of the pending habeas corpus proceeding.

"We Think We Should Wait." "We think we should wait until the habeas corpus case is completed," Dr. Bourke said, "so that all of the evidence introduced in that case will be available to the board. Possession of that evidence will facilitate any action the board may take."

Dr. Bourke had said previously that the board should go into the matter thoroughly, but had indicated that any move to order an official investigation might be held up until the habeas corpus hearings were completed.

Other board members referred inquiries about the case to Dr. Bourke.

Harry Walther of Kansas City, an assistant Attorney-General, attended the meeting as legal adviser to the board. Following the conference Walther said the Attorney-General's department would make no recommendation until a complete transcript of evidence introduced in the habeas corpus proceeding was available.

Dr. Bourke said he was a classmate of Dr. Kelley in college.

Those Present at Meeting.

All of the board members were present at the meeting, which was held at Hotel Baltimore. The members, in addition to Dr. Bourke, are Dr. E. T. McLaughlin, State Health Commissioner and secretary of the board; Dr. P. T. Bohan of Kansas City; Dr. Fred W. Bailey of St. Louis; Dr. W. T. Elam of St. Joseph; Dr. W. L. Brandon of Poplar Bluff and Dr. E. Sanborn Smith of Kirksville.

As previously related, Dr. Muench has been dropped from St. Louis Medical Society "for non-payment of dues." It is understood in medical circles that he has attempted to pay up, but that payment has been refused and he is definitely out of the society, although, owing to ethical restrictions, no statement on that point is forthcoming.

HOOVER GETS HEAVY MAIL

Secretary Says 99 Per Cent of Letters Are Commendatory.

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Oct. 24.—A flood of mail, pouring in on former President Herbert Hoover after his latest attack on the administration of President Roosevelt, was declared last night by Paul Saxon, Hoover's secretary, to be "99 per cent commendatory."

Tens of thousands of letters have come to Palo Alto since Hoover retired from the presidency. But Saxon said, the peak was reached in the week following Hoover's speech to the Junior Republicans of Far-Western States in which he assailed the fiscal policies of the New Deal. The average was 1000 letters a day, and there were stacks of telegrams. Almost all of the letters commenting on the Oakland speech bore the signatures of the writers, Saxon said, but one "message" merely was signed "an old-fashioned Republican." It was a broom. On the address tag was written: "Return postage guaranteed if not accepted."

CAFE MAN AND DAUGHTER BEAT AND CAPTURE ROBBER

Take Shotgun Away From Intruder at Gilmore, Mo., and Knock Him Unconscious.

An attempted robbery yesterday in a restaurant at Gilmore, Mo., was thwarted by a Lester Stephens, proprietor, and his daughter, Miss Helen Elizabeth Stephens, when they took the robber's shotgun away from him and beat him into unconsciousness.

The robber, a former bootlegger, entered the restaurant about 2 o'clock and asked for a glass of water. After drinking it he left, then returned a few minutes later with a shotgun. Instead of raising his hands, Stephens grappled with the intruder.

While they fought, Miss Stephens jerked the shotgun from the man's hands and beat him on the head. When he became unconscious, Stephens notified Deputy Sheriff Preston Heady, who took him to the county jail in St. Charles. A can of alcohol was found in the prisoner's automobile and turned over to Federal authorities.

CHINESE DOLLAR DROPPING

Ministry of Finance Denies Rumors of Devaluation.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 24.—Chinese Japanese tension and rumors of impending devaluation today sent the Chinese dollar to its lowest level in months during trading on the Shanghai exchange markets. The Chinese dollar closed at 32 1/16 cents against the United States dollar, compared to yesterday's rate of 34 1/4 cents. Foreign bankers expressed a belief that the decline reflected waning confidence in the Chinese dollar.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Finance, however, said he was unaware of any Government plan for pegging the Chinese dollar to a new low level, around 28 cents, rumored, and said its fall was caused by speculators' manipulations.

EUGENE EPSTEIN FREED IN KILLING OF COOPERMAN

Jury Acquits Real Estate Man Who Testified He Fired at Politician in Self-Defense.

Eugene J. Epstein, 56-year-old real estate dealer, was acquitted yesterday on a charge of second-degree murder in the killing of Abe Cooperman, hotel proprietor and Democratic politician. A jury in Circuit Judge Connor's court returned the verdict after deliberating one hour and 10 minutes.

Zach H. Hughes, 410 Westminister place, foreman of the jury, said the verdict was reached after two ballots. At a previous trial of Epstein last December the jury was unable to agree.

The real estate dealer, the final witness yesterday, told the jury he had acted in self-defense when he shot Cooperman in the lobby of the St. Francis Hotel, Jan. 26, 1932.

He testified that Cooperman came to him four days before the shooting with the request that he sell $7500 worth of bonds for him. After being assured by Cooperman that the transaction was entirely regular, Epstein said he took $2900 worth of the bonds to a brokerage firm and returned the proceeds to Cooperman, who gave him a 5 per cent commission.

The next day, the witness continued, the brokerage firm notified him that the bonds had been stolen. After telling the firm he would get their money back, Epstein said he told Cooperman about it and Cooperman agreed to return the money. It was decided that they would meet at the Hotel at 2 p. m. Jan. 26.

In the meantime, Epstein testified, he had heard that Cooperman had threatened to kill him, so he put a revolver in his coat pocket when he went to keep the appointment. When they met in the lobby of the hotel, Epstein said he asked Cooperman for the money, and Cooperman refused to give it to him.

Epstein said he told Cooperman that unless he gave it to him, he would have to explain where he got the bonds. Cooperman cursed him, jumped to his feet and started to draw a pistol, Epstein said. He testified he then drew his revolver and shot Cooperman.

Lloyd Berresheim, 1221 Hamilton avenue, testified that while standing near the hotel several days before the shooting, he overheard Cooperman tell another man that Epstein was going to "squawk" and that he (Cooperman) would shut Epstein up if he had to kill him.

Later, Berresheim said, he met Epstein and warned him of what he had heard. In reply to questions, the witness said Cooperman was "a pretty bad fellow" and that he knew that he carried a revolver.

ETHIOPIAN EX-KING GUARDED

Precautions Taken to Balk Any Italian Restoration Move.

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 24. — Reports that the imprisoned former Emperor, Lij Yassu, has been removed from Harar to the interior for safekeeping appear true, although the Government admits nothing officially.

It was disclosed that Fitaurari Shire, Yassu's special guardian, arrived in Addis Ababa a week ago and returned after two days to the former ruler's domicile near Harar. Thence, it was reported, Yassu was taken to an undisclosed place to guard against any Italian attempt to rescue him and restore him to the throne.

Ohio Sales Tax Upheld.
AKRON, Oct. 24. — The State Appellate Court upheld the constitutionality of Ohio's 3 per cent sales tax yesterday. Returning a decision in an injunction suit filed by Michael L. Fox, president of the Summit Growers' Market, the Court held the Legislature had misnamed the "sales tax," but that it was constitutional under the heading of excise tax. The Legislature is authorized by the Constitution to place a tax on the right to acquire property, the Court said.

'TOBACCO ROAD' NOT OBSCENE, JUDGE FINDS, ISSUES WRIT

Chicago Barred From Interfering for Seven Days; "Must Consider Times," Jurist Says.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Oct. 24. — Federal Judge William H. Holly issued a temporary order today restraining the city of Chicago from interfering for seven days with the production of "Tobacco Road," a play closed Monday at Mayor Edward J. Kelly's order.

The order prevents the Mayor and other city officials from interfering with presentation of the play and from revoking or threatening to revoke the licenses of theaters in which it may be produced. Judge Holly said:

"I feel that the Federal Court should hesitate in setting aside the order of an administrative officer. Therefore, I felt it my duty to examine the play and decide from the script if it is indecent."

"I read the play and do not find it is indecent or obscene."

"We must consider the customs and manners of the times. Take the bathing costumes, for instance."

Persons wearing present day bathing costumes would have been punished in other times, but are not punished today.

"I find that profanity is used in the play, but this seems to be

DUTCH SCHULTZ SHOT BY GUNMEN, TWO AIDS KILLED

Notorious Gangster Attacked in Newark Cafe—Bodyguards Fatally Injured, Chauffeur Hurt.

ANOTHER WOUNDED IN NEW YORK CITY

Fired on When About to Leave Barber Shop—Police Hunt Suspect, Are Told to Shoot to Kill.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Arthur (Dutch) Schultz, notorious gangster, was shot with his chauffeur and two bodyguards in a Newark (N. J.) cafe last night.

The two bodyguards, Otto Berman and Leo Frank, died early today of their wounds. Schultz is in a serious condition with three bullet wounds, as is Bernard Rosenkrantz, the chauffeur.

Shortly after this attack, another Schultz aid, Martin Krompfer, was shot as he was about to leave a barber shop at Broadway and Forty-seventh street, in the heart of Manhattan's night life district.

Schultz in Newark Hospital.
Dr. Earl Snively, medical director of City Hospital at Newark said today the condition of Schultz was so serious that another blood transfusion was necessary.

Schultz and Rosenkrantz are in a ward on the second floor. No one else is in the room, which is reached after traversing a long corridor and rounding a corner. In the corridor there are four, sometimes five, policemen on duty. At the entrance to the driveway, used by the ambulances, are two detectives in plain clothes. A radio squad car circles the block, watching every car which passes.

Dr. M. N. Epstein, an interne at City Hospital, not only operated on Schultz but also provided blood for Rosenkrantz. Dr. Epstein was not sure Rosenkrantz would live
"But we have done our best," he said.

Endeavoring to put a stop to the worst outbreak of gang warfare here since prohibition days, police ordered the arrest of Albert Stern, already wanted for the murder yesterday of Louis Amberg. Stern's picture was identified by three witnesses as that of the man who wounded Krompfer.

Police were told to "shoot to kill"
if they encountered Stern.

Attack on Schultz.
Schultz was sitting in the cafe with his three companions when two men threw open the door and blazed away with machine guns.
The gunmen fired at least 20 shots, witnesses said, and then fled through a back doorway.

Officers were summoned by a telephone call to police headquarters.

"Send me an ambulance," said a voice. "I'm dying."

Police found Frank lying on the sidewalk outside the cafe. Deputy Chief John Haller said he thought Frank had followed the gunmen in an effort to cut off their escape, only to be shot down by others in the attacking squad.

Schultz was sitting inside, hold-
"You're Schultz," said the officer.
"Are you shot?"

"Yes, and it's damn painful," Schultz replied.

Haller said Schultz later told him: "You're killing me, you're killing me. I've told you the truth."

Haller said he did not understand the meaning of the sentences.

Police took seven men and three women to Newark headquarters for questioning. Some of them said they had been dancing on the second floor and were not aware of the shooting. Rosenkrantz, questioned by officers, said merely: "Give me an ice cream cone."

Shooting in Barber Shop.
Some witnesses said they saw four men flee from the barber shop but a Negro porter told police he saw only one, later identified as Stern. Krompfer had just been shaved and was putting on his coat, the porter said, when a pistol was fired. He was seriously wounded in the back.

TRAPPERS FIND WRECKED PLANE

Ship in New Brunswick May Have Been Liqueur Runner.

EDMUNSTON, New Brunswick,
Oct. 24.—Authorities began an inquiry today to determine the identity of a wrecked seaplane found in the woods of Gullamite Mountain, 80 miles north of here, by two French-Canadian trappers.

The plane, which gives evidence of having crashed years ago, is thought by some investigators to have been a liquor-running craft.
There was a report a few years ago that such a ship crashed in Northern New Brunswick. The trappers, Will Levesque and Theophile Rucsaid the plane's motor was half-buried in the ground. The wings, pontoons, propeller and cabin windows were broken. Surrounding the wreck were blankets falling apart from exposure and rust-covered canned goods.

JOCKEY AND PAL ARE INDICTED IN DEATH OF WOMAN

Willie Saunders Accused of Being Accessory to Murder, Walter Schaeffer of Act Itself.

By the Associated Press.
LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 24.—An indictment charging Jockey Willie (Smoky) Saunders with being an accessory to murder and Walter Schaeffer, race track exercise boy, with the murder of Mrs. Evelyn Siwinski were voted by the council grand jury here today.

The joint indictment was returned by the jury several hours after it began investigating the automobile ride death of the young Louisville married woman whose body was found on the Ohio River road here about 3 a. m. last Sunday.
The jury heard the testimony of Mrs. Agatha Mackison, who also was on the fatal ride which ended a night of drinking and merry making.

Saunders, 20 years old, who rose to fame this year by riding winners in the Kentucky Derby here and The Preakness at Pimlico, Md., was at liberty under $5000 bond.
Schaeffer, 25, is a native of Chicago Heights and has been a rider since he was 15. Both denied any responsibility for the woman's death. Schaeffer today formally waived extradition at Baltimore.
The indictment which named Schaeffer as principal and Saunders as accessory defined an automobile as the instrument of murder. Saunders was accused of having aided, abetted, encouraged and counseled the crime.

The commonwealth sprang a surprise when it used Saunders as a witness before the grand jury. The jockey, waiving immunity, appeared before his inquisitors with his attorney, W. S. Heidenberg.

He "Felt a Bump."
Saunders told Chief of Detectives
Edward McElliot that Mrs. Siwin-ski got out of the automobile when she became ill from too much drinking and was left at the roadside,

Willie Saunders Accused of Being Accessory to Murder, Walter Schaeffer of Act Itself.

By the Associated Press.
LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 24. — An indictment charging Jockey Willie (Smoky) Saunders with being an accessory to murder and Walter Schaeffer, race track exercise boy, with the murder of Mrs. Evelyn Siwinski, was voted by the county grand jury here today.

The joint indictment was returned by the jury several hours after it began investigating the automobile ride death of the young Louisville married woman whose body was found on the Ohio River road here about 3 a. m. last Sunday.

The jury heard the testimony of Mrs. Agatha Mackison, who also was on the fatal ride which ended a night of drinking and merry making.

Saunders, 20 years old, who rose to fame this year by ridding winners in the Kentucky Derby here and The Preakness at Pimlico, Md., was at liberty under $5000 bond.

Schaeffer, 25, is a native of Chicago Heights and has been a rider since he was 15. Both denied any responsibility for the woman's death. Schaeffer today formally waived extradition at Baltimore.

The indictment which named Schaeffer as principal and Saunders as accessory defined an automobile as the instrument of murder. Saunders was accused of having aided, abetted, encouraged and counseled the crime.

The commonwealth sprang a surprise when it used Saunders as a witness before the grand jury. The jockey, waiving immunity, appeared before his inquisitors with his attorney, W. S. Heidenberg.

He "Felt a Bump." Saunders told Chief of Detectives Edward McElliot that Mrs. Siwinski got out of the automobile when she became ill from too much drinking and was left at the roadside.

HELD FOR MURDER

WILLIE (Smoky) SAUNDERS.

and that he, Schaeffer and Mrs. Mackison drove further up the road. They came back, he said, and at the point where Mrs. Siwinski was put out he "felt a bump" and "had an idea they might have hit the girl." Saunders qualified this by saying he was in the back seat of the car and had no personal knowledge that they had struck the woman. He said the two women were intoxicated, but that he and Schaeffer were not.

Schaeffer said all four were "pretty drunk." He agreed with Saunders' version that Mrs. Siwinski became ill and asked to get out of the car. He drove the car away from where she got out, Schaeffer related, then after several miles turned around and came back.

Schaeffer said on the return trip he saw the young woman's body lying in the road, swooned to pass it, and saw another car coming from the opposite direction. He was frightened, he said, and continued on to Louisville. Schaeffer said the second car came to a stop after he had driven past it.

What Mrs. Mackison Said.
Mrs. Mackison, in her statement to police that preceded filing of charges against the two, said her escort drove the car over the body twice, once as Mrs. Siwinski staggered in the road after getting out of the car, and again coming from the opposite direction "about 50 or 60 miles an hour."

Saunders denied Mrs. Mackison's assertion that she was told, "You don't know anything; you didn't see anything; don't say a word; you're lucky you're alive." He also denied he knocked Mrs. Siwinski down in front of a night club. He was advised by his attorney not to answer a question as to why he did not report the accident to police.

SCRIMMAGE SENSATIONAL PUTTING GIVES REVOLTA "PRO" GOLF HONORS

BILLIKENS WILL HAVE 16-POUND WEIGHT EDGE IN GAME TOMORROW

By James M. Gould. Coach Muellerleile doesn't like the term "breathe" and he declared that "set-up" is too easily repeated into "upset" but even so it is hardly likely that worry over the result of his Billikens game with Arkansas State tomorrow night will cause Muellerleile to lose any sleep to-night. In every way, St. Louis U. looks to be the class over the visiting eleven. Of course, upsets can and do happen—but they won't tomorrow night.

In the first place, the Billikens are in finest physical condition and after their great showing against Marquette, have all the needed confidence in their ability. There need be no fear of over-confidence; this 1935 St. Louis team isn't built that way. In the second place, the statistics of the two eleven's show a big weight advantage for Muellerleile's team—and that's not such a terribly heavy combination, either. According to the weight-lists of the contending teams, the Billikens line will average 191 pounds to 171 for Arkansas State, an advantage of 20 pounds a man. The St. Louis backfield isn't a very heavy one averaging only 170 pounds, but at that, it is nine pounds heavier a man than is the ball-carrying quartet of the visitors. This gives the Billikens a 16-pounds a man team margin.

Center Weighs 130 Pounds. There isn't a 200-pounder on the Arkansas team. The heaviest member is Stiller, 190-pound tackle. The center, Moreman, weighs only 150 pounds and one-half back. Cunningham is listed at 145. Now, the lightest Billiken is Lou Dione, rated at 159—and Lou is one of the best men on the Muellerleile squad. The only light line man is Al Banfield who has taken over temporarily at left guard. Banfield weighs 168.

As to reserves, the Billikens have all the better of it. There are numerous St. Louis replacements while the Arkansas State squad consists of only 21 men. So, weight and numbers favor the home side. There remain only ability and experience to be considered in arriving at a conclusion as to the probable winner of the game. A football player gets experience from combat with teams in his class or in a higher class. The opposition St. Louis has had—Sewanee, Kirkville, Creighton, Rolla and Marquette—surely has been a better teacher and a giver of experience than has that of Arkansas State. In these modern football days, it isn't absolutely safe to predict that any one team will win from another, but if there were any such safe prediction it would be that St. Louis would win tomorrow night—breezing.

THE PRIZE WINNERS

By the Associated Press. OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Oct. 24. A total of $7280 prize money was awarded in the P. G. A. national tournament, which ended yesterday. The remainder of the $10,000 guarantee was divided on a mileage basis for transportation.

By the Associated Press. OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Oct. 24. Johnny Revolta, who played his first golf with clubs made of broomsticks, ruled as king of the Professional Golfers' Association today.

His scepter a magic-touched putter that needed three strokes on but one green of the 172 he covered, the curly-haired Milwaukee youth drove the graying Tommy Armour from the final yesterday, and a with a relentless bombardment of par.

Armour, flying the colors of the guard of golf, was not surprised that he fell before the remarkable putter of his 24-year-old opponent. Long before the final match ended, the veteran Tommy said, with a hopeless gesture, "What any man do against a short man like that boy has?"

Youth Wins Over Age. Because Armour's hair, once coal black, is becoming silver streaked, and because he has won the big prize of golf from A to Z in 14 years of campaigning, his contest with Revolta was billed as a struggle of age versus youth.

Revolta Off to Early Lead. Revolta had a brilliant 33, two under par, on the morning of the match, while Armour carded a 37. This put Revolta three up and he increased the lead as the day wore on.

He ended the first 18 with even par, four up, and widened the margin to six up by the end of the twenty-seventh, putting the third time while Armour required another 37. Although Revolta's chipping and putting were outstanding, the match brought no single sensation—nothing like a 40-foot putt or a hole-out from off the green. Armour, six down and six to go, flinched a brief hope for himself by taking the thirty-first when Revolta wasted one in trees and momentarily lost his putting touch. But Revolta promptly laid his next tee shot within 12 feet of the pin on a par three, and took his par safely for the half and the match.

McBRIDE "B" ELEVEN DEFEATS CENTRAL, 7-6

McBride High School's "B" football team won a 7-6 victory over Central's "B" eleven yesterday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium. Elias Saffa scored in the first quarter on a 10-yard off-tackle play. Costello added the winning point on a line plunge.

Central came back in the second quarter to tally its touchdown, but missed the extra point. Central held for four downs when McBride had the ball on Central's one-yard line in the fourth quarter.

DIZZY SAYS HE MADE $4300 BY 'BARNSTORMING'

By the Associated Press. LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—Jerome (Dizzy) Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals dropped into town yesterday with the remark that he has "been getting a dirty deal."

"The stories that came out of Chattanooga and New Orleans," said Dizzy, "leave a whole lot out. And now I'll speak my piece."

"Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga club, takes a rap at me for walking out on 375 fans at a charity game. He makes it look like I wouldn't perform. He's the one who called that game off."

"I say to him: Joe, I'll go out there and pitch a couple of innings anyway, and he takes a disgusted look at the handful of customers and answers: 'No, if they don't appreciate what we're trying to do we won't have a game.' Then when I'm gone I discover he makes me the goat."

"And as far as New Orleans is concerned, they didn't have more than a dozen or so in the stands and when I see that I say, 'Shucks! I won't take a chance of ruining my arm for that but I won't let your charity down.' So I turned over a check of my own for $25 to the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce charity fund and that's a whole lot more than the gate receipts would have amounted to."

Dean said he hardly figured the barnstorming tour had been a flop since he had "netted $4300 for the old 'Diz' bankroll so far and that's not to be sneezed at."

Dean said he "probably will be a holdout next spring."

He declined to amplify the statement, but he made certain he wouldn't be with the New York Giants next season if the Cardinals refuse to meet his terms, whatever they may be.

BRUNDAGE SAYS U. S. WILL SEND TEAM TO OLYMPIC GAMES

EVENTS BELONG TO ATHLETES, NOT POLITICIANS, OFFICIAL STATES

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—The United States positively will be represented in the 1936 Olympic games, Avery Brundage of Chicago, president of the American Olympic Association and chairman of the American Olympic Committee, said today in a bristling statement in reply to opponents of this country's participation in the games.

"The Olympic games belong to the athletes and not to the politicians," his statement said. "Knowing the temper of the true sports leaders and of the amateur athletes of this country who are unanimous on this subject, I say positively that there will be teams representing the United States in the 1936 games. The sportsmen of this country will not tolerate the use of clean American sport as a vehicle to transplant old world hatreds to the United States."

"In accepting the invitation to compete in the 1936 Olympic games, the American Olympic Committee, like the Olympic Committees of 48 other nations which have accepted, does not endorse the policies of any Government. The committee considered nothing but sport and its requirements."

Politics Have No Bearing.

"Germany's political policy within or without its borders has no bearing on the subject. The committee only followed the universal and unbroken precedent of 40 years and ignored irrelevant political, racial and religious affairs. Attempts to twist and distort the unanimous decision of the committee into an endorsement of the Nazi policies are nothing but barefaced efforts."

"The American Olympic Committee, composed of representatives of more than 70 leading amateur sport organizations, after fully investigating all charges and after due deliberation, accepted unanimously the invitation to participate in these games."

"These men, most of whom for many years, without remuneration, have devoted time, thought, energy and money to this cause, know the best interest of amateur sport and have in mind the prestige of the United States. They will never allow our athletes to be made 'marionettes' to a cause not their own, or amateur sport to be sacrificed to a political issue. The American Olympic Committee is the only organization which has authority to deal with the representation of the United States in the Olympic games."

Having Fought for Freedom.

"As a result of hundreds of requests, the American Committee is publishing a 16-page pamphlet covering the entire Olympic situation," Brundage's statement continued.

"The bitter feelings engendered, the attempted coercion and intimidation by fair means or foul, the vicious and insidious propaganda which are being used in this campaign largely by individuals who have never learned the lessons of amateur sport and thus do not hesitate to use methods contrary to all codes of sportsmanship, are an indication of what may be expected if religious, racial, class or political issues are allowed to intrude in the council hall of sport where they have no place."

"Many dare not even voice their opinions because of the social, political or economic pressure applied by certain organized minorities. However, it is safe to say that the vast and overwhelming majority of intelligent Americans realize that we have many opportunities for the exercise of our altruistic impulses right here in the United States. It would seem only proper to set our own house in order before we attempt to reform the world."

"It is notable that everyone who has visited Germany has reported courteous and hospitable treatment and that German authorities are fulfilling every pledge made to the International Olympic Committee."

A FARMER NAMED GRIMES TO HOLD LIVESTOCK SALE

Burleigh Grimes, stubble-bearded veteran of the pitching wars, who helped the Cardinals to two pennants and a world championship, and who managed the Bloomington, Ill., team for the St. Louis National League organization last season, is now Burleigh Grimes, farmer.

At his farm near New Haven, Mo., next Tuesday, Farmer Grimes will offer at public auction registered and non-registered livestock including a hunter brood mare, with colt at side, a five-year-old gelding, broke to harness, and "fine 3 or 5-gaited saddle, 17 hands high, will make a good hunter," 20 head of registered cows and 16 calves.

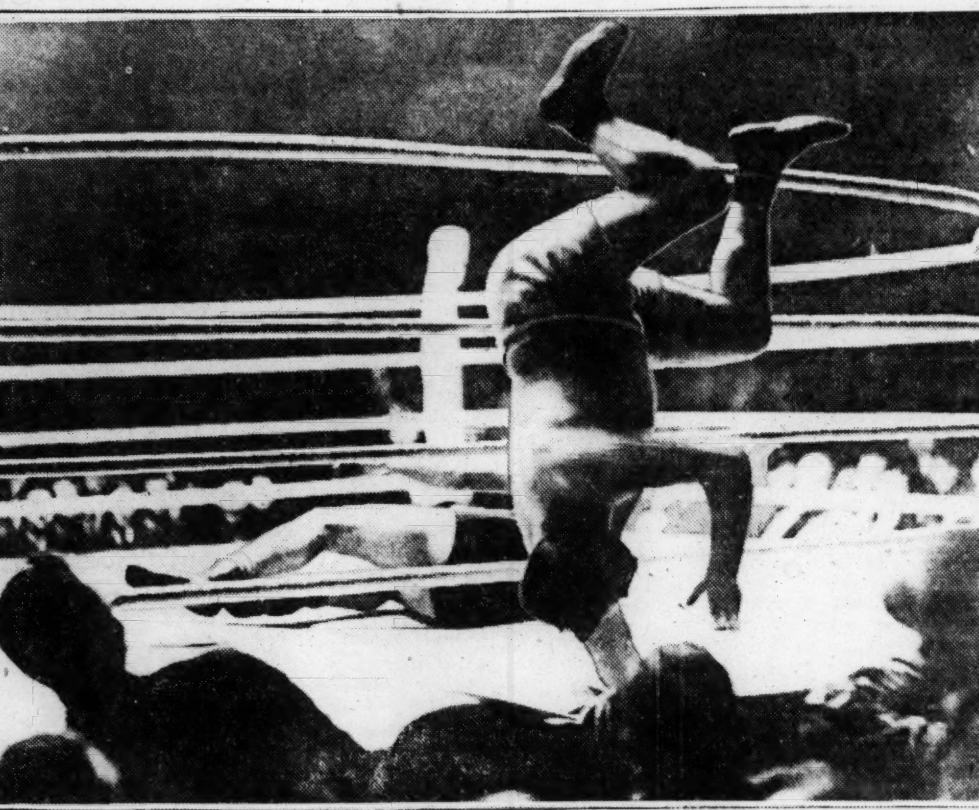

Besides pitching and managing baseball clubs, Burleigh finds time to raise livestock and train horses. No wonder he made good on the diamond.

AMATEUR BOXING SHOW AT COLISEUM NOV. 5

The next amateur boxing show to be held at the Coliseum will be Nov. 5, Benny Kessler, matchmaker, announced last night.

Kessler plans to sign Herman West, Buckner (Ill.) light-heavyweight, to meet Pete Little, South Side boxer, and Tony Moretti, S. B. A. C. lightweight, to fight Tommy Starr, Madison (Ill.).

Cardinals' Long Arm.

JOE SCHULTZ and Joe Mathes, field men for the far-reaching Braden-Rickey organization, are on their way to California, to hold a trial camp at Fullerton, near Los Angeles, for young baseball players. It is the last trial camp of the season and the first ever held on the Pacific Coast by the Cardinals. When Charley Barrett, the great Redbird scout, has recovered from his recent operation at St. John's Hospital, he will join Schultz and Mathes at Fullerton.

"If present plans materialize, there probably will be a new league organized in California, with Fullerton as one of the clubs," Schultz explained. "California is a fertile field and one that has been neglected, because of the travel expense involved. Players who do not catch on with a club in the Pacific Coast League, do not get much chance. And remember, they have to be pretty good to get a chance, with a Class AA league."

"We'll have probably 200 boys at the camp and we are expecting a good yield from that number. We try to give trials to athletes between the ages of 17 and 23. Occasionally we'll consider a pitching prospect above the age of 23, but if he wants to be a catcher, infielder or outfielder, we try to discourage him if he's that old. You see, it takes several years to send him through the different grades of our schooling system and if he's 23 when he starts, he won't have much of a baseball life ahead of him by the time he gets to the big league."

"With pitchers it's different. It may take longer to develop a curve and control. Some pitchers don't learn to really pitch until they've had five or six years of intensive schooling."

The Fullerton trial camp will open about Nov. 4 and run about 10 days. Schultz and Mathes, driving to the Coast, plan to do a bit of scouting before the camp opens.

Detroit Does It.

BILL STOCKSICK, Sportsman's Park groundskeeper, will make a trip to sunny Florida and the Cardinals will work next spring on the best training field they have ever seen, if the club goes through with plans formulated by Manager Frisch and Business Manager Branch Rickey last March.

Conditions for training are as good at Bradenton as could be found anywhere. The sun shines bright, the beach of white sand is a great place to while away the few minutes that one can find between naps to the grindstone and if you can get away the king fishing is excellent a few miles out in the gulf. But the playing surface at the Bradenton ball park, where a certain amount of time has to be spent, whether you like it or not, is not all that could be desired.

The Bradenton committee will do anything that Sam Bradenton wants done, but the point is that there is no skilled agronomist to direct the manuring of the diamond. And that's why Bill Stocksick probably will be packing his grip early in February.

Remind Me in the Spring.

Frisch suggested to Rickey last spring that it would be a good idea to send Stocksick to Florida next spring to put the big league yard stick on the Bradenton playing field. The infield ought to be graded and covered with new soil, imported from wherever good baseball field soil can be found, which is merely a mechanical problem for the transportation department to handle.

Through years of filling up holes that have developed in the Bradenton field, the infield now risks like a young mountain. A shortstop, going back after a fly ball, has to leap from the infield precipice to the outfield valley. Furthermore, the soil used to surface the infield is not good. It cakes, erodes and in places becomes hard as a rock. The result is that after a few weeks Dr. Harrison J. Weaver, the club trainer, has a fine stable of charley horses to curry in the infirmary.

Neal Conway, groundskeeper for the Detroit Tigers, goes to training camp annually. As a result, when the Cards went to Lakeland last year, they found a baseball diamond that measured up to big league specifications. And what can be done at Lakeland can be done also at Bradenton. For the baseball committee there will do anything the Cardinals want done. So all Rickey has to do is to send Stocksick to Florida to superintend the job. Stop that crying, Bill; where's your Spartan fortitude?

Answering T. W. W.

1. If Hallahan had been sent to Red Bank, before his contract with the Cardinals expired, his salary would have been cut immediately to conform with International League salary limit rules. It would have been necessary to get waivers before he could be sent to a minor league. This answers your second question also.

2. The usual contract provides that the stipulated salary is to be paid only while player is in major league and that in the event of a transfer to the minors, the salary will be reduced to conform with salary limit rules. In exceptional cases a free agent may be signed to a contract, providing that he will not be sent to a lower league until after one full year of trial in the majors.

3. Except for such special clauses, all baseball contracts are the same, the rookie signing a document similar to the one rendered the veteran.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 24. POWELL CROSLY JR., president of the Cincinnati Reds, announced last night that both Charley Dressen, field manager, and Larry S. MacPhail, general manager of the club, would be retained for the 1936 season.

MacPhail's contract expires Oct. 31.

"I told him he needed no new contract," said Crosley, "for his position is secure as long as I am at the head of the club. We may need a conference on salary, but I do not anticipate any trouble in coming to terms."

White Lines and Quadrangles in Mundy Title Game

The tie existing for first place in the Municipal Football Association is expected to be broken next Sunday afternoon when the fifth round doubleheader brings to a close the first half of the season. The feature game will be a meeting between the Quadrangle Club and the White Lines in the opening game at 1:30 o'clock. In the second game at 3:30 on the drill grounds in Forest Park the Mordie Wolves will play the Weber-Deibels.

The Quads and White Lines will enter Sunday's game as undefeated, untied and unscored upon contenders for the championship. Each club has won three games.

Since both clubs have held their foes scoreless, the battle will determine which of the two lines is the strongest and whether the Quads' offense is stronger as is indicated at least in the total points scored. The Quads have outscored the White Lines, 42 to 25.

Both managers plan to avail themselves of the two rules changes

'MAN MOUNTAIN' DEAN AND TWO EX-CHAMPIONS ON ARENA CARD

If all goes according to advance notice, those wrestling fans who visit the Arena tonight will witness a demonstration of "the flying tackle," and the "flying broad jump," the "leg paralyzing death lock," the crotch-and-slam, and perhaps a bit of wrestling.

Two of the participants on the card are former world championship claimants: Jim Browning and Gus Sonnenberg. Browning's claim was recognized only in New York state and a few other spots, but Sonnenberg was more widely billed as champion although there remained considerable doubt as to his real standing as a wrestler.

Chief Little Wolf, billed as a Navajo Indian, will face Sonnenberg in the headline bout of the evening, one fall to a finish. The secondary feature will see the introduction of "Man Mountain" Dean, a 315-pound athletic freak who for some time admitted that he knew little more about wrestling science than how to pick up an opponent and flop him down on his back underneath his own mountain of flesh. Dean will oppose the 225-pound Orville Brown of Wallace, Kan., in a 30-minute time limit match.

Two Duseks on Card.

Browning opposes Ernie Dusek while Emil Dusek, one of four wrestling brothers, opposes Karl Davis, of Columbus, O. George Calza, of Italy, who wrestled here with some success a few years ago, meets Frank Speer of Atlanta, Ga., in the opening bout.

A majority of the wrestlers who will compete here tonight performed at a show in Kansas City last night. Chief Little Wolf and Ernie Dusek went to a draw, while Man Mountain Dean defeated Frank Speer. Karl Davis lost to Strangler Lewis, while Jim Browning was defeated by a winner in his match at Kansas City.

The program: Chief Little Wolf, 215, Trinidad, Colo., vs. Gus Sonnenberg, 210, Boston, Mass. To a finish. SECONDFINAL—"Man Mountain" Dean, 315, Norcross, Ga., vs. Orville Brown, 225, Wallace, Kan. Thirty-minute time limit. THIRD MATCH—Ernie Dusek, 225, Omaha, Neb., vs. Jim Browning, 235, Veneta, Mo. Thirty-minute time limit. SECOND MATCH—Karl Davis, 225, Columbus, O., vs. Emil Dusek, 220, Omaha, Neb. Twenty-minute time limit. OPENING MATCH—Frank Speer, 225, Atlanta, Ga., vs. George Calza, 235, Italy. Twenty-minute time limit. Time of first match, 8:30 p. m.

Co-Captain of Kirksville Is Real "Iron Man"

By the Associated Press.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Oct. 24. DESPITE a broken nose and bruised eye which he suffered in the Warrensburg game last week, Co-Capt. Carl Noble of the Kirksville Teachers is ready to continue his "iron man" role at Springfield tomorrow night.

The rangy, 200-pound left tackle played every minute of the hard struggle which Kirksville won from the Mules, 10 to 9. During his four years on the college squad here, Noble has never been unavailable for duty because of injury. In seven years of college and high school play here he claims never to have missed a practice session. Noble was named on the all-M. I. A. team last year. He is one of the high-ranking students in the college.

Soccer League Votes Tonight on Change of Park

A decision will be reached tonight by stockholders and other officials of the St. Louis Soccer League with respect to tenure of Sportsman's Park. It has been unofficially stated that the league will give up its lease on the baseball grounds and play its games at two softball parks, one at Kingshighway and Arsenal street and the other at West Side Park, Skinner and Delmar. Tonight's meeting will be held at the Mayfair Hotel.

It is expected that an announcement will be made within the next 24 hours regarding a new sponsor for the national champion team, formerly known as the Centrals. Three of the star players of the team have received offers from clubs in Chicago and New York, but will remain here if a suitable connection can be made. Andy Frederick, holder of the club's franchise in the professional league, said today that he needs employment of some sort for four of his players, in order to keep them here.

At least one of the sponsors of teams in the Municipal League has taken up the "farm" idea which has proved so successful in the development of baseball players. "Mickey" Clawsey, backer of the champion Irish Village club, has taken over a junior club of last season, known then as the 18th Ward Democrats. The players are now in the senior class (over 18 years), and will play in Group 4 at Fairground under the name "Clawseys." The backer said today he will strengthen the team with a few more experienced players and will use it as a developing ground for his Irish Village team.

Smoke THREE

The Answer is "Satisfaction"

Most 5c cigars keep you on a steady finding for satisfaction—without quite finding it. The first puff tastes fine—but there's always something lacking when it comes to steady smoking.

But La Azora is different from other 5c cigars—different tobaccos—different blending—different character. It is really mild—with a delicate flavor that keeps growing on your taste. It is made—not for sensation.

Red-Coated Hunters Plunge Into Woods as Missouri's Three-Day Deer-Hunting Season Is Opened

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 24.—Sportsmen dug out red capes and coats and hied for the woods today, taking advantage of an annual three-day deer season that opened this morning. To minimize danger of hunting in dense underbrush of the Ozark highlands and border regions, the State Game and Fish Department urged sportsmen to wear the bright colored garments.

Whether the request strictly has been observed, the department couldn't say, but it pointed out that not a single fatality had occurred during the past three years of legal deer hunting in this state.

A Good "Season." The deer outlook, the department said, indicated a "good season." A summary of reports from game wardens disclosed that in some localities deer have increased as high as 50 per cent over last year.

County reporting gains were: Crawford, Taney and Franklin, 10 to 50 per cent; Shannon, 5 to 35 per cent; Oregon, 25 per cent; Wayne, 5 to 25 per cent; Reynolds, 20 per cent; and Iron, Butler, Carter and Ripley, 5 per cent.

St. Genevieve County reported the outlook as "normal." Jefferson and Washington County wardens reported decreases.

Deer are more plentiful in Gasconade, Taney, Carter and Dent counties. Other "good" counties in the past three seasons have been: Franklin, Ste. Genevieve, Ripley, Wayne, Oregon and Osage.

Deer hunting regulations are strict. Bucks with four points on each antler legally may be killed and the season bag limit is one animal. Hunting is permitted only from a half hour before sunrise to

CREDITON CENTER OUT OF GRINNELL BATTLE

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 24.—The Crediton Bluejays went back to basic fundamentals last night. Coach Marchie Schwartz drove the team to a 10-0 victory over the Grinnell Bulldogs in the Grinnell battle.

Dr. W. L. Sucha, Crediton physician, revealed that eye trouble had been the cause of the team's defeat. He said that the team had been forced to play with one eye.

Since deer hunting was legalized in 1932, after a six-year lapse, 307 animals have been reported killed. The department's figures show 193 animals were killed in 1932, 65 in 1933 and 48 last year.

DR. DAVIS TO RECEIVE FOREST PARK TROPHY

Dr. I. R. Davis will receive the trophy of the Forest Park Golf Club emblematic of the golf championship at a Halloween party to be given in the Forest Park Clubhouse, Oct. 26. Dr. Davis obtained permanent possession of the three-time trophy by defeating Richard Shillito in a 36-hole match, 6 and 4, last week.

The cup was donated by the Municipal Athletic Association and was in competition for 17 years. Dr. Davis won it three times in the last six years.

Maplewood "C" Eleven Tied. Maplewood and C. B. C. High School's "C" football teams played a scoreless tie yesterday afternoon on Maplewood's Junior High School field.

BIG TEN TEAMS WORK HARD FOR TOUGH BATTLES

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—If they gave championships for trying and believing in football, the Big Ten trophy would go to Lynn Waldorf and his Northwestern Wildcats.

Caged, tamed and licked twice this season, first by Purdue and then by Ohio State, the Wildcats still are convinced that they have a whale of a football team. On paper, they don't rate more than an outside chance against Minnesota Saturday, but they are almost downright confident of surprising everybody but themselves by giving the Gophers a tough afternoon they won't forget for many a year.

"The Old Spirit," Ohio State's "Scarlet Scourge" licked the Wildcats, 28 to 7, last week and many of the experts on hand said the Buckeyes would have scored two or three more touchdowns if they hadn't remembered the criticism leveled at them for manhandling Drake, 85 to 7, the week before. But instead of taking their defeat soberly, the Wildcats kicked themselves all the way back home from Columbus to Evanston. They agreed almost to a man that they played "dumb football" and handed the victory to the Buckeyes.

Any spectator watching the Wildcats work out for the Minnesota battle would gain only one impression—that Northwestern not only was undefeated, but unscored on. With all the fire, dash and enthusiasm of a championship team, they plunge into work, breaking up Minnesota formations as worked by freshmen and driving through for long gains.

Every Big Ten coach drove his team through long drills yesterday for Saturday's engagements.

Cosch Bo McMillin, hustling to get together an Indiana team that can give Ohio State an interesting afternoon, sent his players through their longest workout of the season.

Florida Beckons Golf Pros With $21,000 Pot of Gold

By the Associated Press.
OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Oct. 24.—The glitter of gold on Florida's sunny fairways and greens attracted the "money players" of the golf world today as the annual winter tournament situation in California remained unsolved.

Their annual exclusive party over, with the peppery Johnny Revolta, 24-year-old Milwaukee marksman, king for the next year, the pros looked with interest to a string of four open meets in Florida and vicinity in which $21,000 in prizes has been hung up.

California Situation. Meanwhile, efforts were being made to straighten out the California situation. George R. Jacobus, president of the P. G. A., said the schedule submitted by the Californians had been rejected because it conflicted with the Florida schedule, and also because the purses were not as robust as the P. G. A. officials believed they should be. Jacobus said, however, that he expected the difficulties would be adjusted and that the money players again would test their skill for California gold.

The $21,000 in prizes will be competed for within the period of a month. The first of the tournaments, emphasizing punting, Ohio State polished up its highly geared offense and defense and revealed that Quarterback Stan Pincus probably would be ready to play against the Hoosiers.

Change at Minnesota. At Minnesota, Coach Bernie Bierman replaced Bud Wilkinson at right half with Bill Matheny and tried a defense for Northwestern plays.

Illinois drilled for two and one-half hours and the Illini backs turned in a dazzling exhibition of laterals and forwards. Iowa tuned up for the Illinois invasion with a brilliant aerial attack.

Michigan worked on kicking for Columbia; Purdue scrimmaged against Carnegie Tech plays, while Chicago and Wisconsin worked on defense.

the Orlando open, starts Dec. 5 and runs three days. It carries a purse of $3000. From Dec. 15 to 18 the $10,000 Biltmore open will be staged, and from December 20 to 22 the pros will trek over a Nassau course in the $5000 British colonial open. The Florida program closes with the $3000 Miami open the first week.

Cream of the Crop. The winter golfing carnivals, with their fat purses, lure the cream of the professional crop.

Johnny Revolta, $1000 richer by virtue of his victory at Twin Hills here yesterday, will return to Milwaukee to bide his time until the opening of the Florida gold hunting season. Tommy Armour said he would return to his headquarters at Medinah, Ill., and would likewise bide his time until the season opens.

DO YOU OWN A PLYMOUTH?

It gives you about everything you could ask for, doesn't it? A great car, and it deserves Eveready Prestone in the radiator—the anti-freeze that's approved by car manufacturers and guaranteed by National Carbon Company, Inc. It provides "one-shot" winter-long protection against freeze-up and rust.

Eveready Prestone will not evaporate no matter how warm the weather gets between cold spells. Has no odor, contains no alcohol or glycerine. And Eveready Prestone has again reduced prices, thanks to biggest sales in its history. Now only $2.70 a gallon. Your dealer has a chart showing exact cost for all cars, in any temperature down to 62° below zero.

Put in Eveready Prestone now. Get the freeze-up question (and the rust problem) settled for the winter. According to the 20 year average, freezing weather should reach St. Louis about Oct. 27.

PART THREE

SINCLAIR ASSERTS EPIC WILL CURE ALL NATION'S ILLS

In Coliseum Speech Crusader Again Urges Mass Production for Use of Unemployed.

ADVISES 'STEALING' ONE OF OLD PARTIES

Rise of a Hitler to Rule America Is Sure Unless We Stave Off Bankruptcy, He Declares.

Upton Sinclair, Socialist who stole the Democratic party in California last year to make an unsuccessful race for Governor, addressed the League for Industrial Democracy at the Coliseum last night and, like the itinerant herb doctor who traveled the countryside in the days when the novelist started his crusade against capitalism 33 years ago, offered his nostrum, EPIC, as a sure cure for economic ills and political fevers.

EPIC, as has been explained frequently, is the trade name of Sinclair's remedy, derived from the initial letters of his campaign slogan, "End Poverty in California." Now, Sinclair explained, it means "End Poverty in Civilization," and by another term "National Epic," he has carried the crusade to 15 states.

The economic ills, the speaker contended, are continuing to rack the Treasury with from 10,000,000 to 14,000,000 unemployed and can be relieved only by elimination of unemployment. EPIC, with its mass production for use by the unemployed and its exchanges to facilitate distribution of products among those engaged in the hundreds of activities under the plan, was offered as a specific.

To provide land, factories and machinery for use by the unemployed for their own support, Sinclair suggested that 10 billion dollars be appropriated for the purpose instead of for relief.

Federal and State Credit. "We want Federal credit and state credit to set up these farms and factories and exchanges," Sinclair said. "I am not talking about subsistence homesteads; I am talking about mass production for use by the unemployed. As for the man who has a job and wonders how this will affect him, let me remind him that it will take the unemployed off the labor market. Ever since before the Civil War we have had a system which draws the profit into the hands of a few. The reason the laborer doesn't get his share is because he is competing against other laborers. The reason the farmer doesn't get his is because he is in competition with other farmers."

Sinclair, who had kept on his tweed topcoat against the chill of the unheated building, asked for a show of hands by those who were unemployed. About every fifth or sixth person, it appeared, was out of work.

His Life Study. "You can end poverty any time you get ready," the speaker continued with the enthusiasm of a campaigning evangelist. "I know how to end poverty. It has been my life study. I've been thinking of little for more than 30 years. Every person in this audience who didn't raise his hand should remember he is carrying those who are unemployed. At the present rate relief expenditures will bankrupt the country. The burden is on the middle class."

But the middle class always refuses to be exterminated. It will find a Hitler—a man who will wave the flag, quote the Bible and then go back stage and get a check from Wall Street. We are headed for Fascism unless we act quickly to end unemployment, stave off bankruptcy and prevent the rise of some Hitler who will catch the fancy of an oppressed middle class."

Grandfathers and Parties. Sinclair advised that a third party movement was futile and that all should align themselves with "one of the two major parties to 'steal' them from the politicians now controlling them."

"There is no use talking about a co-operative commonwealth," Sinclair went on shaking his head. "They have listened to me for 30 years and approved generally, but they would go out and vote the Democratic or Republican ticket. They voted that way because their grandfathers did so."

"The trouble with the Socialist party is that it hasn't enough grandfathers. When I was a candidate in California, I chose the oldest

Upton Sinclair, Socialist who stole the Democratic party in California last year to make an unsuccessful race for Governor, addressed the League for Industrial Democracy at the Coliseum last night and, like the itinerant herb doctor who traveled the countryside in the days when the novelist started his crusade against capitalism 33 years ago, offered his nostrum, EPIC, as the sure cure for economic ills and political fevers.

EPIC, as has been explained frequently, is the trade name of Sinclair's remedy, derived from the initial letters of his campaign slogan,
"End Poverty in California."

Now, Sinclair explained, it means "End Poverty in Civilization," and by another term "National Epic," he has carried the crusade to 15 states.

The economic ills, the speaker asserted, are continuing to rack
the Treasury with from 10,000,000 to 14,000,000 unemployed and can be relieved only by elimination of unemployment. EPIC, with its mass production for use by the unemployed and its exchanges to facilitate distribution of products among those engaged in the hundreds of activities under the plan was offered as a specific.

To provide land, factories and machinery for use by the unemployed for their own support, Sinclair suggested that 10 billion dollars be appropriated for the purpose instead of for relief.

Federal and State Credit.
"We want Federal credit and State credit to set up these farms and factories and exchanges," Sinclair said. "I am not talking about subsidizing homesteads; I am talking about mass production for use by the unemployed."

"As for the man who has a job and wonders how this will affect him, let me remind him that it will take the unemployed off the labor market. Ever since before the Civil War we have had a system which drew the profit to the hands of a few. The reason the laborer doesn't get his share is because he is competing against other laborers. The reason the farmer doesn't get his share is because he is in competition with other farmers."

Sinclair, who had kept on his tweed topcoat against the chill of the unheated building, asked for a show of hands by those who were unemployed. About every fifth or sixth person, it appeared, was out of work.

His Life Study.
"You can and poverty any time you get ready," the speaker continued with the enthusiasm of a campmeeting evangelist. "I know how to end poverty. It has been my life study. I've been thinking of little more than 30 years."

Every person in this audience who didn't raise his hand should remember he is carrying the family. He is unemployed. At the present rate expenditures will bankrupt the country. The burden is on the middle class.

"But the middle class always refuses to be exterminated. It will find a Hitler—a man who will wave the flag, quote the Bible and then go back stage and get a check from Wall Street. We are headed for Fascism unless we act quickly to end unemployment, stave off bankruptcy and prevent the rise of some Hitler who will catch the fantasy of an oppressed middle class."

Grandfathers and Parties.
Sinclair advised that a third party movement was futile and that all should align themselves with one of the two major parties to "steal" them from the politicians now controlling them.

"There is no use talking about a co-operative commonwealth," Sinclair went on, shaking his head.
"They have listened to me for 30 years and approved generally, but they would go out and vote the Democratic or Republican ticket.
They voted that way because their grandfathers did so."

"The trouble with the Socialist party is that it hasn't enough grandfathers. When I was a candidate in California, I chose the oldest

ORPHIR DROPS MOORING BUOYS
AND MAKES FAST OVER HULK

Anchoring of Floats to Hold Salvage Ship in Place for Diving Operations Accomplished Under Difficulties.

By GILBERT McALLISTER.

ABOARD SALVAGE SHIP OR-PHIR, Oct. 24.—Two mooring buoys were made fast yesterday on either side of what is believed to be the wreck of the torpedoed Lusitania.
Completion of the hazardous task now makes it possible to moor the Orphir between them, directly aboard the wreck, and ready for diving operations.

The buoy anchors, taken from salvaged German battle ships at Scapa Flow, found their mark almost 90 fathoms (540 feet) below.
The Orphir, now moored between the buoys, faces at right angles to the sunken hulk, which points northeastward.

At 3 a. m. yesterday First Officer
Horn weighed anchor at Summer Cove and slowly advanced against the swelling sea. Caution was necessary to keep the cumbersome gear on the foredeck from being dislodged.

Three Preliminary Cruises.
By breakfast we had reached the location and Captain Russell, declining to eat, went to the bridge.
With Wireless Operator Jarrett working the echo sounder, the Orphir made three preliminary cruises over the area, picking up the wreck each time.

These and previous chartings showed the captain exactly where to place the buoys, but any error in making allowance for tide and swell would be fatal to success.
Once these big anchors were over the side they would never come up again.

With co-ordination between the echo sounding of Jarrett, the engine room and the helmsman, the Orphir glided slowly forward, ready to drop the first mooring buoy from starboard. "Cut" came the order from the bridge, and axes severed holding ropes.

Gunnel Torn Away.
With a crash the buoy struck the water, and then came a thud as the gunnel as the chains and cables ran overboard after the buoy. The heavy, thrashing metal tore away the gunnel like match wood, sending big splinters flying on the deck and into the sea.

Laying the second buoy was even more difficult. The Orphir was placed in position and the order given to cut. At that moment a large wave caught the ship. Only the captain's exclamation stopped the first mate by a split second from dropping the anchor in the wrong spot.

The buoy was in the water, however, and dangerously close to the port bow. During an hour spent seeking our position again, and three hours waiting for a fog, which had closed in on us, to lift,
this floating mooring frequently crashed heavily against the Or-phir's hull. Just one really heavy sea might have been enough to sink us.

About 3:30 we again checked our position, and with the fog lifted slightly, succeeded in dropping the anchor. After the Orphir had been made fast to both moorings, soundings were taken again. They determined the salvage ship was di-

HAS OUTLIVED USEFULNESS

Harvey O'Connor in New Book Says Business Is Racket; Urges Socialistic System.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Harvey O'Connor, in "Steel-Dictator," his new volume published today, says the American steel industry "has outlived any usefulness" and is leading up the road to Fascism.

O'Connor, whose book "Millions of Millions," attracted wide attention, analyzes the position of the steel industry with respect to profits, to labor, and to international peace.

"The road taken by the steel magnates is clear enough," he writes.
"It leads through fear and force to Fascism."

"The nominal owners of the steel corporation," he says, "control nothing and contribute nothing.
The steel corporation has become a racket for the nourishment of bankers, brokers, gamblers, lawyers and executives."

"It is no longer able to furnish work or wages sufficient to keep its employees of the relief rolls. The conclusion is plain that private ownership of the corporation has outlived any usefulness which the classical economists once postulated."

"Under Socialism," he writes,
"the steel mills can be used to make steel instead of profits. . . . The saboteurs of production at 23 Wall street can be scrapped, along with obsolete mills and politicians who piqueted between demagoguery to the steel worker and subservience to the Iron and Steel Institute."

ENGLISH JOURNALIST LEAVES
BRAZIL AT OFFICIALS' ORDER

Former Attaché of British Embassy Says 'Fascists Are Behind This.'

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 24.—Ernest Hambloch, journalist and one-time attaché of the British Embassy, is on the way to England today aboard the freighter Masmith, at the order of Brazilian authorities.

Authorities decided to comment publicly on Hambloch's sudden departure last night, known only to a few of his intimates, but his final protestations that "Fascists are behind this" were heavily discounted in all official authorities invited Hambloch to leave a month ago. That request followed an investigation motivated by the charge of the newspaper Diario da Noite that Hambloch's book, "His Majesty the President," was injurious to Brazil.

Hambloch, correspondent of the London Times at the time of his banishment, had been British Consul-General and commercial secretary of the British Embassy. A resident here for 26 years, he was considered by many to be the outstanding authority on Brazil's financial and economic history.

HOOVER AND SALVATION ARMY

He Says It Is One of Greatest Remedial Influences.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 24.—
Former President Hoover, whose World War career brought him close to the Salvation Army, described it last night as one of the greatest remedial influences of the United States long before the war. He introduced Gen. Evangeline Booth at a reception preliminary to the opening of the Army's territorial congress here today.

"It was the Salvation Army that searched the highways and byways for the fallen," Hoover said. "With the great war, new burdens were thrust upon it from the battlefield.
With the hideous aftermaths of war, in unemployment and distress, came even greater demands for its helpful hand. x x x The Salvation Army represents pure idealism. It represents the spirit of Christ."

Genevieve Tahouis in the liberal

CHURCHILL URGES BRITAIN TO GO ALL WAY WITH LEAGUE

Tells Commons Empire Should Provide for "Secure and Lasting Command of Mediterranean."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Members of Parliament wound up debate on foreign affairs today and prepared for the national elections Nov. 14 in which the Government's policy in the Italian-Ethiopian situation will be the main issue.

King George's address will be read tomorrow, proroguing Parliament after nearly four years.
The new Parliament will convene Dec. 3.

Winston Churchill told the House of Commons today that Britain should immediately provide for "secure and lasting command of the Mediterranean."

Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty at the outbreak of the World War and the man who, it was said, will take that position if a new national government is elected, declared that was the practical moral to be drawn from the present international situation.

He asserted the Government should be prepared to "go the whole way with the whole lot" in defense of the League of Nations covenant.
British Navy Behind League.

"The reason the League is now a reality is that there has been behind it the royal navy," he said, praising the British fleet concentration in the Mediterranean.

Churchill, who is a former Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared the Italian-Ethiopian conflict was a "very small matter," compared to the rearmament of Germany. He said "the whole of Germany is an armed camp."

He said 1,800,000,000 ($4,000,000,000) was "being spent in the course of the present year in direct and indirect military preparations by Germany."

"The industries of Germany are mobilized for war to an extent ours were not mobilized even a year ago."

MARCH 5th:
I've made another blunder in administering

we cannot deduct the

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Criticism of Relief Station Pickets.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I am all the more convinced that I am one of the few who have seen the pickets in front of the relief station several times lately and each time there were men promanaging back and forth carrying banners and cards denouncing the relief operations. I would be ashamed to have people see me doing a thing of this kind.

Let me say that I myself am on relief, but I am only getting emergency relief. I haven't any job that I really want to do, but I walk the streets every day of the week looking for any little repair work I can get to pay my rent and buy my family a few clothes, instead of abusing the relief because I don't get everything to live suitably on. I don't want to be a person that is acting as pickets would work half as hard to get something to do as they do carrying cards, they might not have to ask for so much.

I noticed one or two cards in the line accusing this office of discrimination against the Negro. I wish to say that I have been in the office several times and never have seen anything of the sort happen. On the other hand, I have heard Negroes ask for the most unreasonable things and get mad and abuse the clerk because they did not get what they asked for. I am proud I can say that the people handling this station are the most reasonable and accommodating people I have seen in my life. I am in contact with them in some time; always ready and willing to listen to you and give your case consideration.

If the relief agencies were to give everybody everything they asked for, the country would be bankrupt in less than 12 months. I will agree that there are a number receiving relief that are not deserving, but in an organization taking care of several million people how are they to be kept out?

I have heard this several times: "Why should I hunt work? If they find me a job, I will work for it." I don't intend to kill myself hunting for work as long as I can get my grocery bill and rent paid, and a few clothes when I need them. Statements of this kind make my blood boil. I was raised honest and proud and as long as I can get enough work to pay my way (if only part of it) I intend to do so. I am past the age where I can get a job, but I can walk around a number of the younger men now, if given the chance.

Now, why not let them do our very best and co-operate with the relief department and see if we can't get off the roll and stay off? Let business put a shoulder to the wheel and shove, paying their help a living wage and hiring all the help they can use, in place of laying everybody off that they can.

ONE ON RELIEF.

Vice on Vandeventer.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I READ in your paper the other day that vice resorts have reopened in East St. Louis. Why worry about East St. Louis vice, when you have it right in the heart of St. Louis' residential section on Vandeventer avenue? It happens that these resorts did not even close the American Legion convention, although several complaints were made to the police. Thousands of automobiles pass this street with women and children riding in them. This section is now and always has been wide open between Delmar and Delmar, on the east and west sides. At least, the Valley in East St. Louis is located in a section of the city where no one has any business except for certain reasons. But Vandeventer is a main artery of traffic.

MRS. C. W.

Says Movies Are Glorifying War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
IN a recent message prepared for the New York Herald Tribune Forum on Current Problems, President Roosevelt pledged himself to do his part in keeping America out of war. He said, "I want to feel at all times that I have the sustaining influence of a healthy, sound, and above all, a thoroughly American public opinion on the subject."

I believe that the President has the hearty co-operation of the people. It is to be remembered, however, that our young generation today is made up of men and women who were too young during the World War to realize and remember its horrors. It is to them that the greatest effort should be directed to discourage war. Their inborn desire for glory must be countered.

It seems to me that the motion pictures, and more especially the news reels, are failing to do that very thing. Recently, they have been portraying the warfare between Italy and Ethiopia. They picture the modern guns and tanks and airplanes. They show to the youth of the country thousands of men departing for war with smiling faces. They do not once give them a glimpse of the morbid disaster and destruction that such a life which results. They are building up the desire for glory in young hearts instead of trying to abolish it.

The motion pictures, I believe, are President Roosevelt's strongest opponents in his effort to keep peace. If they cannot portray the destruction of war, they would be performing a great service to the country to refrain from showing anything pertaining to war.

JOSEPH D. FLAUM.

A BULWARK OF OUR LIBERTIES.

Dr. Hugh S. Magill of Chicago, president of an organization known as the American Federation of Investors, has sent every member of Congress a letter protesting against the operations of congressional investigating committees. After stating that he has been "annoyed, harassed and threatened" by representatives of an investigating committee, he puts, among others, this question:

Is it not pertinent to inquire whether our nation is to continue government of the people, by the people, in which the duly elected representatives of the people make laws for the people in accordance with the will of the people, or whether the free expression by the people of their wishes to their representatives in Congress is to be stifled or suppressed by the threat of investigation?

At this the Chicago Daily Tribune throws its hat into the air and emits three lusty cheers. Predicting that Dr. Magill's "forceful assertion of American civil rights" will be "an outstanding document in our political history," that newspaper cites "the so-called lobbying investigation" as "one of the most openly arrogant and inexcusable" manifestations of the present administration's will to terrorize and bulldoze the American people. "The hour is approaching," concludes our Chicago contemporary, "when the citizens of this Republic must decide whether they are to rule or be ruled."

The rank and file of American citizens, we dare say, will not be moved by Dr. Magill's indignation at congressional investigations or by the Tribune's irrelevant enthusiasm over his remarks. Indeed, the people have come to look on the investigative function as one of the most useful which the national legislature possesses. The history of such investigations entitles them to this opinion.

There is nothing new about congressional investigations. The first Congress began to function in 1789, and in 1792 the House authorized a committee to inquire into the defeat of Gen. Arthur St. Clair in the Northwest Territory. This procedure was justified as necessary to the proper guarding of public expenditures. In 1818, the Senate provided a committee with a grant of power to call for persons and papers in connection with the conduct of the Seminole war in Florida.

All told, there have been hundreds of congressional investigations from that time to this. Not all have sought to obtain information from private citizens, as the critics would have us believe. Up to 1925, the executive branch of the Government had been investigated no less than 285 times, 37 of these occurring during the administrations of Grant.

No question exists as to the constitutional power of Congress to conduct investigations. This was clearly declared by the Supreme Court in the case of McGrain vs. Daugherty in 1927, in a decision which held that the authority to investigate, together with power to enforce investigation, is not only appropriate but essential to intelligent legislative operation. The decision in the Sinclair case in 1929 reaffirmed this view, and it was further supported this year in the MacCracken decision, upholding the right of a branch of Congress to punish for contempt.

We should be the last to say that no congressional investigation has had an objectionable feature. Some of them have been politically inspired. Some have strayed from the purpose for which they were authorized. At times witnesses have been treated with abruptness and at times the proceedings have been conducted with an eye on the gallery.

Even so, a review of what has been accomplished through such investigations makes plain that they have done the country an infinite amount of good. They have been spotlights which have illuminated dark corners of crookedness and special privilege. Wrongdoers, who otherwise would not have been punished, have been sent to prison as a result of legislative inquiries. Excessive campaign expenditures, the loose handling of "other people's money," the practices of munitions makers—a long list could be made of subjects on which the public has been enlightened by congressional inquiries.

The cost has been negligible. As has often been remarked, the oil investigation, by stopping misuse of a great natural resource on the public lands, paid many times over in savings to the taxpayers, for all the investigations Congress has authorized or may authorize for many years to come. This very positive side was what Senator Couzens of Michigan was referring to when he said that it would be better for the country if Congress spent nine-tenths of its time investigating.

The joint attack of Dr. Magill and the Chicago Tribune on congressional investigations recalls similar assaults in the past. When he began the oil investigation which brought to light the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills scandals, the late Senator Walsh of Montana was called a "mud-gunner." Senator Wheeler of Montana was similarly condemned for securing the investigation which forced Harry Daugherty to retire from the Harding Cabinet. Likewise, the late Senator Caraway of Arkansas, when he exposed the devious ways of lobbyists in Washington. Likewise, former Senator Reed of Missouri when he undertook the investigation which disclosed the shocking extent of the corruption in the 1926 senatorial primary in Pennsylvania and Illinois.

We repeat what we have said on other occasions: The congressional investigation is one of the most effective bulwarks of American liberties.

FARTHEST NORTH IN FOOD.

We want to issue a none-too-timely warning to the spinach lovers, the orange-juice addicts, the vegetarians and other food faddists that they are in for some real competition in the person of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the Arctic explorer. Mr. Stefansson is out to prove that all we have previously felt, thought and imagined about food is the veriest buncombe, and all that man needs, not only to satisfy gastronomical cravings but to attain the highest mental and physical development, is straight meat or fish.

In an article in the current Harper's Magazine, Mr. Stefansson tells of a charming little trip he once had up under the Arctic Circle with a lot of Eskimos. Winter had set in and when old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard, all she found was fish and tea—and not enough of the latter to go round. So Mr. Stefansson settled down to four or five months of straight fish. He ate it three times a day. It may sound monotonous, but the program really was varied. In the morning, he ate raw fish, ate it, he says, like corn on the cob. In the late afternoon, things were before bedtime, he had a little snack of raw fish. Not wishing to deprive his Eskimo hosts of what little tea they had, Mr. Stefansson washed his fish down with good old aqua pura.

Well, after five or six months of this, he felt so fine that he thought he would next try a diet of straight meat. No Worcestershire, no catsup, no brown gravy and mashed potatoes or any such slushy stuff—just meat. Not even salt. After the first few months, he and his companions did occasionally hanker for a fried egg or a piece of bread or an apple, but after they really got into the meat diet—say, after six months of it—everything was just dandy.

The commotion you hear is Brillat-Savarin revivifying in his grave.

THE WISDOM OF MR. WHITE.

William Allen White says a sagacious, if obvious, thing when he remarks, in an article written for a Princeton University publication, that the Republican party cannot hope to succeed in the next presidential election if it offers "a nondescript candidate upon a platform of indictment."

It is true that the Republican party in 1920 offered a nondescript candidate, upon a platform largely of indictment of the Wilsonian policies, and succeeded in a landslide. But times were different then. The economic issues that cut across party lines today had not arisen, or, more precisely, had not got into the two-party arena. The old shibboleths, the old slogans, controlled the emotions of the vast majority of voters. There were more congenial Republicans in the country than congenial Democrats; the G. O. P. had the better organization and the bigger war chest—these factors, entirely apart from the mood of disillusionment into which the country was plunged after the war and the Versailles Treaty, were sufficient to bring about the "return to normalcy" under the banner of Warren Gamaliel Harding.

Vastly different are the conditions that confront the Republican party today as it seeks to wrest control from another Democratic administration. The old rallying cries have become meaningless. Appeals to traditional loyalties have lost the vote-getting power of other days. It could not be otherwise in a time when, as Mr. White points out, 20,000,000 people are either on relief or are living "on a low and un-American standard of living."

The problem is how to get the army of unemployed back to work—how, in the language of the Kansan, to make "adequate consumers of American goods" out of the one-sixth of the population who have been reduced to a bare subsistence level. That is the problem underlying all the others that perplex the people. It has brought realism into the fight for political power—a realism that cannot be obscured by political hokum. Burning incense at the shrine of Lincoln will not win the next election for the Republicans; mere denunciation of the New Deal will not win it.

Mr. White states the case with his accustomed clarity: "The Republican party, which is supposed to be the party of brains and wealth, must realize that it cannot demagogue its way into power by indictment of the Democrats without offering some definite constructive program to replace the promise of the party they seek to overthrow."

The Sage of Emporia has never uttered truer words.

HELP THEM HELP OTHERS.

The campaign of the Salvation Army for $95,400 to carry on its activities in St. Louis and St. Louis County deserves support. As everybody must know, the Salvation Army fills a unique place in the life of the modern metropolitan area. It reaches into dark places which otherwise would be without cheer. It has found a way to provide help for the friendless that yields immediate results. What it does is not duplicated by other social service organizations.

The occasion of the current campaign is a good time for the community to remind itself that the Salvation Army is peculiarly identified with St. Louis. It was here that the Army's first girls' rescue home was established. Its first training college was also opened in this city. The War Cry, the Army's official publication, made its first appearance here. The record of this worthy organization during its more than 50 years in St. Louis speaks eloquently for itself. The city and its western suburbs would be ungrateful if they did not extend the aid which the Salvation Army's 1936 budget calls for.

AND THIS FROM BOSTON.

He was a nice old gentleman, a bit garrulous perhaps, but he told an interesting yarn, and the generation that sat at his elderly feet holds him in pleasing remembrance. None of them has ever wholly forgotten Maud Muller and the "might have been," and somewhere in the distance "still stands the school house by the road, a ragged beggar sunning," and among the happy acquaintances is "the barefoot boy with cheek of tan," and still we can see the "clustered spires" looking down on the moving columns, still see a flag waving defiantly from a window and hear the grim finality:

"Who touches a dog of my gray head Dies like a dog. March on!" he said.

A gentle romantic, every inch a Quaker, was John Greenleaf Whittier, who now after more than 40 sleeping years is profanely presented as one who could, and did, curse like a pirate. The witness is a Bostonian, a Brahmin, too. In his book the Boston of austere tradition is blown into the bay, and in the city that roars around Faneuil Hall are carousal and song and wickedness burning the midnight oil and lighting the morning stars.

Be Boston as it may, we are, and always will be, persuaded that Whittier's nearest approach to blasphemy was a tut, tut.

DR. HENRY SCHWARZ.

Dr. Henry Schwarz, who has just died, was one of St. Louis' most valued and most beloved citizens. For more than 50 years he practiced and taught medicine here in his chosen field of obstetrics. He assisted at the birth of thousands of St. Louisans, he taught several generations of students and he participated actively in professional societies and was highly honored by them. His monument is the splendid St. Louis Maternity Hospital, to whose foundation and operation he gave much energy.

But, if Dr. Schwarz had never done anything else, he would always be remembered as the man who introduced twilight sleep to St. Louis. Twilight sleep, a form of anesthesia induced by morphine and scopolamine, has taken the age-old curse of pain from childbirth. It has made the bearing of children something for women to look forward to calmly, instead of with horror and dread. Through Dr. Schwarz's efforts—and they involved the conquest of hostile medical opinion as well as lay superstition—thousands of St. Louis women have been spared an excruciating experience.

THE PLIGHT OF OUR COURTS.

A Study of English Judicial Procedure

British courts function with far greater ease and efficiency than ours, reports Missourian; cites simplicity of judicial structure, prompt trial of cases, waning use of juries in civil cases, power of Judges to sum up evidence in criminal cases and fix punishment, and regulation of practice by court rules, not statutory codes.

From a speech by Laurance M. Hyde, Commissioner, Supreme Court of Missouri, before St. Louis Bar Association.

IT was my good fortune to visit England last summer, to go to English courts in session, and to study English procedure both from observation in the courts and from English text books and law journals. The English judicial system does not waste time and effort over questions of jurisdiction and procedure. One reason for this is that the English now have a very simple system consisting of only one court (except for county courts of limited jurisdiction for minor cases). This court is the Supreme Court of Judicature, and it has both trial and appellate branches. All Judges are Judges of this court, subject to assignment to either trial or appellate work, and have been chosen because of their demonstrated ability as practicing barristers, without political considerations, upon recommendation of the older Judges of the court. They are appointed for life, amply paid, and may be retired upon half salary after a certain period of service. Retired Judges may be called back for service when needed. This Supreme Court of England is composed of the Court of Appeals and the High Court of Justice, which is its trial branch and which is divided into King's Bench (for law cases), Chancery (for equity cases), and Probate, Divorce and Admiralty divisions. This single court was created by the Judicature Act of 1873 to take the place of a complicated system of courts with overlapping jurisdiction.

The prompt and efficient trial of cases in the English courts is, I think, due particularly to two things. First: Judges have full authority to direct the conduct of proceedings and to make the trial purely an investigation of facts to find out the truth. Second: Rules of practice and procedure are made by the court. English Judges follow the evidence closely, keep full notes of the testimony, and frequently question witnesses to clear up any uncertainty. One result of having fair and able Judges, who can thus direct trials, is that juries are seldom used in law cases.

Now, only in cases of libel, slander, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, seduction, breach of promise, and certain types of fraud cases, is a trial by jury a matter of right. In other civil cases, a jury is a matter of discretion with the court, and usually a jury is not requested. It is a distinct surprise to an American lawyer to see a personal injury negligence case tried without a jury. Believe it or not, plaintiffs get verdicts, too. The jury system has largely fallen into disuse, in the land of its origin, as a means of settling controversies between individuals.

Back of the efficient work of the Judges, in the speedy conduct of trials, is the elimination from their work of time-wasting details in the preliminary stages of cases. These duties are performed by masters appointed by the court, who settle pleadings, take defaults, and handle the taking of depositions and the production of documents.

The English system is, of course, not perfect. It is often very expensive to litigants because of the double system of solicitors and barristers (both must be employed to get a case tried), and because of the concentration of the civil business in London. Nevertheless, there can be no question about its efficiency in getting prompt and correct results.

England is, of course, noted for speedy criminal justice. . . . As in civil cases, the Judges' authority to direct the proceedings to determine the true facts is a vital factor in reaching correct results in protecting the innocent against false charges, and in preventing the guilty from escaping punishment. The Judge sums up and comments upon the evidence to the jury at the close of the case, and the jury decides as to guilt or innocence. The Judge determines the sentence, and before doing so hears pertinent evidence which would not be admitted in the trial.

The defendant may appeal as a matter of right upon any question of law, but the appellate court may dismiss his appeal if they consider that no miscarriage of justice has actually occurred, even if the legal point may be decided in his favor. The defendant may also appeal from the sentence only, but upon such an appeal, the appellate court has authority to increase as well as to diminish the sentence. Undoubtedly, this would tend to discourage an appeal for the mere purpose of delay. As a safeguard against the conviction of an innocent person, an appeal may be allowed upon a question of fact, and the appellate court may even appoint a Special Commissioner to take additional evidence to be considered in such a case.

The defendant in a criminal trial may choose either to make an unsworn statement to the jury, without being subject to cross-examination, or he may give evidence on oath subject to cross-examination like other defense witnesses. The prosecution must not comment upon the fact that the defendant does not give sworn evidence for the defense, but the Judge may do so in whatever way and to whatever extent he sees fit. The prosecution may take depositions which can be used at the trial if defendant has had opportunity to cross-examine and there is good cause for the absence of the witness. The sickness of jurors does not cause a mistrial if both prosecution and defense give written consent to complete the trial, so long as the jury is not reduced below 10. Women as well as men serve on juries. The defendant has 20 peremptory challenges in felony cases but none in misdemeanor cases.

The English belief in having speedy trials is shown by the fact that they do not require a trial to be held at the place where the crime was committed, but allow it to proceed either there or at the place where the defendant is apprehended; and further provide that, in case court is not to be held at either place within a month, the prisoner may be remanded to some other convenient court for trial.

The ever-apparent purpose of English criminal justice is fairly but quickly to find the guilt or innocence of persons charged with law violations, and to enforce without delay the punishment provided for those found guilty. It is not unusual for a case to be tried, heard on appeal and the sentence executed, in less than two months from the time the crime is committed. As English writers comment that, recently "there has been manifested an anxious desire for the reformation of the individual, whose importance when accused of a crime seems to have grown in inverse proportion to that of the ordinary individual"; but that "the function of the criminal law is to enforce a definite, though somewhat low standard of public conduct"; that "criminal cases are instances where the law has not succeeded"; that "courts are not hospitable"; and that "while prevention and reform must not be lost sight of, punishment of those who are proved to have offended must be the main object of prosecution." The sister does not receive much attention there.

I have mentioned the fact that English practice and procedure is regulated by rules of court. I do not believe that even the English courts, with Judges having full authority to direct the course of the trial, could function as smoothly as they do if they had to operate under our fixed and rigid statutory codes. Pick up any recent volume of the English law reports and compare with a recent volume of our state reports. You will see at once that our courts have to take much judicial time and fill many pages discussing the meaning, application and interpretation of statutory provisions concerning procedure, both trial and appellate, to show why the merits of the case either will or will not be considered, in spite of or because of procedural technicalities.

You will find little of this in English court reports, because the courts make the rules of procedure, and when a rule is found to be too technical, out of date, ambiguous or is in any wise operating to delay or to obstruct the administration of justice, the English court does not discuss and explain it, but changes it. The Supreme Court was directed by the Judicature Act. Rules are made by a rules committee composed of the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice, the Judges and four barristers. Parliament provides that either the House of Lords or the House of Commons could by majority vote annul any rule. The court has been making rules of procedure since 1873, but no rule has ever been annulled.

In contrast, consider our statutory system; appellate procedure and criminal practice statutes have been substantially the same since 1835; and our civil code was adopted in 1848. These codes were enacted to simplify the old, outworn, over-technical, complicated common law rules and were a great improvement when they were adopted. They should not be criticized because they are old, but because they were made to fit frontier conditions of the days of pioneer circuit riders, rather than those of modern urban civilization, and because a statutory system of procedure is too difficult to change to keep up with changing needs.

Most of the specific proposals for reform in recent years have been merely to amend our statutory codes by giving technical advantages to one party to litigation (plaintiff or defendant, prosecution or defense), to offer technicalities in favor of the other party. Does this reach the root of the trouble? My view of English procedure by court rules is that, instead of balancing technical handicaps of one party by technical advantages of the other, it tends to eliminate technicalities as a factor in determining the result and to make the true facts of the controversy and the merits the determining factor. Does not the enlightened self-interest of the Missouri bar as the public welfare require that our courts be called upon to follow this English example?

HERE is the way administration. The President's continental trip with the President reported to him on the political situation.

Generally, west of Pennsylvania—Roosevelt still in the lead but not unbeatable if opposed by Borah.

Ohio—Outlook gloomy for Democrats because of fierce internal dissension among State factions and botching of Relief handling.

Michigan—Low. The Republicans carried the State in 1934 despite the nation-wide New Deal landslide. They have gained ground steadily since.

Kentucky—Likely to go Republican in next month's election, but the President, personally, is popular and on top.

Illinois—Touch and go; but Roosevelt will have the edge—provided the Chicago machine of Mayor Daley will "come through."

Indiana—Still strongly pro-Roosevelt.

Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa—In the Roosevelt column.

Kansas—Unshakably Republican.

Missouri—Democratic, thanks largely to the potent machine of Ross Pendergast.

California—New Deal has lost some ground, but the President, personally, is still popular and right now could carry the State easily.

Tennessee Feud.

THE new move to resurrect the NRA has started a good old-fashioned feud—the scenes Tennessee feud.

Leaders of the feud are of old Tennessee stock. On one side is Maj. George L. Berry, who, under the sonorous title of Co-ordinator of Industrial Recovery, is attempting to revive the NRA. On the other side is Judge E. L. Davis, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, who opposes that revival.

The feud dates back to the very beginning of NRA, when the Federal Trade Commission made no secret of its belief that the Blue Eagle never should have been born. Now that it is sunk, they want to see it rise again.

Also, Davis and his colleagues have a plan of their own for industrial regulation. What makes them particularly hot under the collar is that their program was just getting under way when Berry zoomed into the headlines with his scheme.

The proposal of the FTC-ers is nothing new. The Federal Trade Act has always empowered the Commission to authorize voluntary fair-trade codes. But few industries took advantage of the opportunity.

Since the Supreme Court killed mandatory codes, however, scores of industries have turned to the FTC. More than 125 applications for voluntary codes are pending before it.

The FTC feels that since the system of compulsory codes has failed, voluntary codes should be given a fair trial.

As a matter of fact, while John is no fainting flower in any kind of fight, he is a gentleman. He never ate among a ham, the voice of a hoghorn and his manners have not got the repose that stamps the case of a Vere de Vere. He would make almost a wrestling champion.

There are the resistant traits of a union leader. Lewis the mauler does excuse. There are in 100 who would be spoken for would be a ham, the voice of a hoghorn and his manners have not got the repose that stamps the case of a Vere de Vere. He would make almost a wrestling champion.

Navy Day.

DURING a recent press conference, Secretary Swanson was asked the date of Navy day. He probably is as ardent a civilian sailor as ever became Secretary of the Navy; but to the surprise of reporters, he hemmed and howed, gazed at the ceiling, puffed at his cigarette, finally replied:

"Uh, er, why it falls on T. R.'s (Theodore Roosevelt's) birthday."

"We know that, Mr. Secretary," the newsman said, "but what is the exact date?"

Another embarrassing pause. Finally, Assistant Secretary Henry Roosevelt came to his boss' rescue.

"Navy day is celebrated on Oct. 27, heprompted, but because it falls on a Sunday this year, the ceremonies will be held the day following."

Ambitious.

ONE thing about Rex Tugwell's Resettlement Administration—it does not lack ambition.

Only a few insiders know the story, but not long ago the RRA suddenly branched out into the business of administering Indian affairs. The venture was short-lived but lively. It happened this way:

While on a speaking trip in New Mexico, Tugwell was much impressed by Joseph L. Dailey, a former judge and active figure in the State's political and social life. Tugwell invited him to come to Washington and become a member of his staff.

Dailey accepted, later reported for duty, but found that Tugwell had nothing definite for him to do. For want of something better, Tugwell finally hit on the ingenious idea of setting up an Indian Division and putting Dailey in charge.

He broached the idea to Harry Hopkins, pointing out that there are more than 10,000 homeless Indians in the West. Tugwell argued that his RRA could use the 40,000,000 acres of Indian lands held in trust by the Government to provide self-sustaining homes for the impoverished Indians.

Hopkins gave his okay and promised a $15,000,000 grant from Work-Relief funds.

Complications developed immediately. John Collier, able, hard-working head of the long-established Indian Bureau, has been engaged in rehabilitating homeless Indians ever since he has been on the job. He entered vigorous protest against Tugwell's plan.

Collier demanded that the money be turned over to him.

Next it developed that Dailey, although an able lawyer, knew nothing of Indian affairs. Finally, some of Hopkins' aides questioned the project on technical grounds and held up the allocation of funds.

Under this barrage of setbacks Tugwell's bright idea blew up.

Merry-Go-Round.

THE Supreme Court can tell the President and Congress where to get off but it holds no terrors for the ubiquitous souvenir hunter. Its shiny new marble palace, open only a few months, already has felt the blighting hand of this public pest. The latest ravage was the carving of a piece from the edge of one of the expensive oak doors.

Vermont's Republican Senator Warren Austin was not included in the original list of guests invited by the Philippine Government to visit the islands at its expense, but got on the junket by substituting for Senator Arthur Vandenberg. When other members of Congress resorted to similar strategy the Philippine Government sent polite notices to those it had invited, asking them not to transfer their acceptance as they could not make the trip.

Lewis's Fisticuffs at Federation of Labor Convention Were Justified by Circumstances, He Thinks.

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

RENO, Nev., Oct. 24.

WHEN John Lewis socked Mr. Hutchinson in the eye at the American Federation of Labor convention an impression seeped out that Mr. Lewis is a big bully—a mauler and a brawler who thinks nothing of assaulting and battering a mild-mannered fellow like Mr. Hutchinson.

As a matter of fact, while John Lewis is a fighter, he is a gentleman. He never strikes and is as considerate and kind as a woman. He would be among the last in any group I know to use the violence of direct assault.

Mr. Hutchinson is no mild-mannered and retiring innocent. "Big Hutch" of the carpenters stands something over 6 feet 2 inches and weighs every ounce of 240. He has a hand like a ham, the voice of a foghorn, and his manners have not got the repose that stamps the caste of a Vere de Vere. He would make almost two of John Lewis in a wrestling ring, and his very appearance to such ordinary conversational amenities as "good morning" is a sort of affront.

He has used his position as a labor leader in a big political way in the last and many other elections.

There are some who believe that the resistance to John Lewis industrial unionism by some craft union leader as "Big Hutch" has more to do with the soft snap jobs of the leaders than with the welfare of the worker.

The feeling is very hot and high. Of course all this does not excuse an assault as an argument, but what "Big Hutch" called John Lewis the moment before the blow does excuse it.

There are not 10 American males in 100 who would let that word so spoken pass, and of those 10, five wouldn't be men and the other five would be hard of hearing.

BYRD TELLS STORY OF ANTARCTIC TRIP

6500 See Movies and Hear His Explanatory Remarks at Municipal Auditorium.

The motion picture record of the Second Byrd Antarctic Expedition was shown to 6500 persons in two performances yesterday at Municipal Auditorium with explanatory remarks by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, leader of the expedition. The Alumnus of Mary Institute sponsored the illustrated lecture.

Expertly made and carefully assembled, the pictures told in chronological order the story of the journey by boat from Boston to Wellington, New Zealand, and on to the base at Little America. A year's experiences of mapping by airplane, living under the snow during the winter night, and the exploratory journeys by dog sled and tractor were reduced to the audience to the hour and a half required for showing the film.

There was no climax like the one in the pictures of the first expedition when the flag was dropped on the South Pole, marking the accomplishment of the main objective. In the film shown yesterday, the beginning of Byrd's solitary stay in a hut 125 miles from the base, as he waved good-bye to the men who had taken him there, was the high point of dramatic interest.

The afternoon audience, 3000 school children and 500 anxious teachers and parents, fretted noisily during the half-hour delay before Byrd's appearance. The children sat quietly while icebergs, mountain peaks, the great ice barrier and the crevasses were on the screen, but became wildly excited at the antics of the penguins, the killer whales, the dogs and the men who were learning to ski.

The film was artistically done, with its startling contrasts of white and black, its alternation between the pictures of the Antarctic ice and snow and those showing the manner in which the men prepared for the long night and kept busy at useful occupations until spring came.

THE REV. J. B. MACELWANE
LECTURES ON EARTHQUAKES
Geophysics Director at St. Louis U.
Addresses Missouri Academy of Science.

Differences between surface and deep earthquakes were discussed last night by the Rev. James B. Macelwane, S. J., director of the department of geophysics at St. Louis University, in an address before the Missouri Academy of Science at Washington University.

In "shallow" quakes, he pointed out, destructive effects are concentrated in the earth's surface immediately above the origin of the tremor. In deep earthquakes, he said, the vibratory motion is felt almost at the same time over a wide area, instead of being observed first at a central point and then spreading outward.

WOMAN DRIVER WHO SLAPPED OFFICER 3 TIMES FINED $25
Also Kicked, Motorcycle Patrolman Says; Describes Her Actions as "Like Wildcat."

Miss Eleanor Krueger, 6804 Vermont avenue, was fined $25 for resisting an officer by Police Judge Simpson today.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sylvester Werner testified that when he tried to give her a summons for not making a school stop at Broadway and Lempi avenue, she refused to take it, slapped him twice, then got out of her automobile, slapped him again, and kicked him. "She was like a wildcat," Werner said.

A passerby, Nick Blasie, 3550 Magnolia avenue, testified he came to the rescue of Werner and Miss Krueger kicked him, too. Werner said he had to call the patrol wagon and that she scuffled with him until she had been placed in a cell at the Second District Police Station.

Miss Krueger offered no defense, and paid the fine. Her attorney told the Court she had no criticism to make of the officer's conduct, that he "behaved like a perfect gentleman."

Although the steel company had filed a general denial in the city's suit, the judgment, which includes interest, was rendered by consent.

CHURCHILL URGES BRITAIN TO GO ALL WAY WITH LEAGUE

after the great war was begun," Churchill said.

While expressing sympathy with the Ethiopians, Churchill declared it was impossible to keep up the "pretense" that Ethiopia was a fit and worthy equal member of a league of civilized nations. Since Ethiopia had appealed to the League, he said, Ethiopians must put their house in order.

He expressed the belief Premier Mussolini would not have "embarked on his Ethiopian venture, but for the profound preoccupation of France in Germany's rearmament and the military and naval weakness of Great Britain."

Declaring France's fear of a rearmament Germany, had led it to settle its differences with Italy at the beginning of 1935, Churchill said, "Very likely when these matters were being settled, what is called a 'League of Nations' was thrown in."

Opening of Campaign.
When the campaign starts in earnest this week-end, Government candidates will be in the field for 357 of the 435 seats in the House of Commons. The Government supporters will include 404 Conservatives, 40 Liberal Nationalists, 20 National Laborites and three Nationalists. Opposition Socialist candidates number 234, and the total may be increased. The number of opposition Liberals has not been announced.

Baldwin Indicates Platform.
Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin has indicated that national unity, backed by sufficient arms to keep world peace, would be the main plank of the Government platform.

Political circles anticipated that an election manifesto, scheduled to be published Saturday, would emphasize four major issues:

1. Rearmament in the face of an armed world.
2. Need of a national mandate to carry through a policy of economic sanctions with all they might entail.
3. The desirability of having a national government with a specific new term to complete the tasks of aiding industrial recovery and solving the problem of unemployment.
4. The urgency of letting nothing be done to imperil Britain's credit.

Some quarters believed the coal industry might be subject to special mention and suggested that Government plans in this direction were the real reasons behind the visits of Capt. Harry Crookshank, Minister of Mines, to Downing street.

Points of Laborite Attack.
The Labor Party was expected generally to attack the Government for what it described as failure to relieve unemployment, industrial conditions and, above all, "special areas"—those parts of the industrial north which have been hardest hit by depression.

Laborites will accuse the Government of delaying its action in the Italian-Ethiopian conflict until too late to prove really effective, and will try to cast doubt on the motives behind the rearmament program.

Both Laborites and Liberals were expected to issue manifestos, attacking the Government's record.

In yesterday's debate in the House of Commons, Capt. Anthony Eden took the floor to face a barrage of questions as he defended and explained Britain's policy at Geneva.

"This is the first time in the history of the world an attempt is being made to operate an international system, based not merely on power but on certain fixed principles of equity," he said. "This is an adventure in which we might all be proud to play our parts."

He expressed his personal belief the League would emerge successfully from the present test, although admitting "it is impossible to estimate the ultimate effect of economic sanctions or the rapidity with which that effect would be produced."

"Personally, I must sincerely hope that in the few days that elapse before nations meet again to consider the dates on which sanctions must be imposed a settlement will be reached."

"But if it is not reached, the House should not underestimate the effectiveness of steps on which the League will be embarking."

This view, however, was not reflected by opposition speakers, who declared the Italians never would be brought to their knees in this manner.

Lloyd George Attacks Sanctions.
"Sanctions might go on for years," said David Lloyd George, wartime Premier, who made one of the most bitter attacks. He asserted there were "enormous gaps" in the sanction system because of the positions of Germany, Brazil and the United States.

Saying he was amazed at Premier Baldwin's reference to the "present lull," the Welshman demanded, "Can the Prime Minister recall a moment since the great war that was more sinister?"

He interrupted Eden to ask if the reported lull was brought about by any assurances given Italy.

"Is there any assurance about the British fleet or not blockading the canal (Suez) or anything else?" Lloyd George asked.

Amid cheers, Eden replied: "No change has been made and no change will be made in the League program, which goes on as it went before. The only assurance—if assurance it can be called—given to the Italian Government is the assurance that we should not ourselves take action alone."

The Marquess of Lothian, a Liberal, said in the House of Lords he was horrified by the lightness with which a government spokesman said there would be no appreciable effect from the application of sanctions until next year. He said he believed a long period of irritating sanctions was a certain way to get into a world war.

party in the United States as the one which would have the most grandfathers.

"Get in one of the old parties and use it for a new purpose. Forget the foreign words that Socialists like to use—'proletariat,' 'l'assés faire.' Talk American so people can understand you."

Comment on Roosevelt.
In an incidental reference to President Roosevelt, Sinclair said that while he did not approve all that the President had done, he believed that "Roosevelt is trying to find a way out of the depression for the people." The remark brought considerable applause.

Referring to the objection raised in California to his proposed issuance of scrip as part of the EPIC program, the speaker produced a Missouri sales tax receipt and declared that Missouri had done what it had been said he could not do.

He reviewed his campaign for Governor of California as Democratic nominee and said special interests had offered millions for support of the campaign. Such offers, he said, were refused.

"I came out of the campaign $15,000 in debt," he said, smiling at the audience of about 1500. "That's why you had to pay to get in here tonight."

ROW IN NEGRO CHURCH

IS AIRED AT HEARING

Members of Congregation Give Their Side in Dispute With Ex-Pastor.

One side of the two-year controversy between the congregation of Pilgrim Baptist Church (Negro), 4443 St. Ferdinand avenue, and its former pastor, the Rev. C. S. Hogue, over ownership of the church property, was aired yesterday in Bankruptcy Court in the testimony of two officers of the congregation and the present pastor, the Rev. Frank M. Williams.

The church corporation, which described itself as having been organized for "preaching the gospel and saving souls," filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition in Federal Court on July 22. The petition asked that the Rev. Mr. Hogue, who is now owner of the church property, be enjoined from selling it, on the grounds it was acquired by him in violation of the articles of agreement and the laws of the congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Hogue bought the church property for $100 last April at a Sheriff's sale, held to satisfy a $137.50 salary judgment, which had been previously obtained by the pastor in a Justice of the Peace court. The congregation, in answer, alleged the judgment was faulty, contending his salary claim was based on a note signed by two trustees, improperly appointed by the clergyman himself.

Series of Misunderstandings. The first witness, Patrick Thomas, who identified himself as a missionary in St. Louis and chairman of the church's board of trustees, explained the trouble started with a series of misunderstandings between the pastor and the congregation which came to a head in 1933, when the pastor sought and obtained a vote of confidence from the congregation, "with a score of 17 to 19."

The vote was so close, Thomas continued, that the Rev. Mr. Hogue said he would resign and asked for $40 owing him for back salary. "We gave him the $40," Thomas continued, "but he didn't leave and continued to preach. There was nothing we could do about it because we hated to get the law after him. He finally ran up a bill for preaching for more than $100."

Fired Two Trustees. Thomas said the clergyman, at the time the vote of confidence was taken, "fired without reason" two trustees and appointed two others to take their place. The new trustees, he charged, signed the salary note with a third, but a fourth member of the board was never told about the note. He added that the two trustees appointed by the clergyman, "never came around the church any more."

James Davis, present treasurer of the congregation, said he was one of the trustees ousted by the Rev. Mr. Hogue. His testimony was similar to that given by Thomas. The present pastor, the Rev. Mr. Williams, also testified. He said he had been preaching at the church since the Rev. Mr. Hogue left, and added he had loaned the congregational $42 for filing fees for the bankruptcy suit.

At the time of the filing of the bankruptcy petition, Federal Judge Moore enjoined the Rev. Mr. Hogue from taking possession of the property, but dissolved the injunction two weeks ago. John B. Edwards, attorney for the former pastor, said he would go ahead Monday in Circuit Court with a suit to eject the congregation from the church.

PHILIPPINE REVOLT PLOT TO SEIZE MURPHY DISCLOSED

Sakdalista Party Accused of Conspiracy Also to Capture Quezon; Fire Gasoline Stations.

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 24.—Philippine constabulary officers disclosed yesterday a purported Sakdalista plan to seize Governor-General Frank Murphy during a revolt against the Insular Commonwealth. Officers said the plot, formulated by immediate independence advocates, included capture of President-elect Manuel Quezon and firing of gasoline stations to spread confusion. The uprising was said to have been timed for Nov. 15 or before. The Commonwealth Government will be inaugurated on that date.

Constabulary detachments have been keeping close watch on followers of Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, a defeated candidate for President and former insurance leader, has charged fraud in Quezon's election. Feliciano Lauzon, self-identified general chairman of the Sakdalista party, denied the conspiracy charges but admitted a peaceable demonstration was contemplated to impress Vice-President John G. Garner and Secretary of War George Dern on their visits here.

Draws Suspicion to Self by Talk of "Huge Loan to Italy."

VIENNA, Oct. 24.—Austrian police are holding as prisoner a man who calls himself Alexander Sycowski of New York City, picked up last month on charges of having a false passport and suspicion of fraud.

He was visited in jail by several men described by the newspaper as Italian financiers. Sycowski had $25,000 worth of jewelry and 100,000 Swiss francs (about $32,500) when arrested at the fashionable Imperial Hotel. He told police he had financed several American bootlegging enterprises during prohibition.

ROCKEFELLER GRANT PROVIDES 30 GOVERNMENT "INTERNS"

College Graduates to Serve as Unpaid Assistants to High Federal Officials.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—A Rockefeller foundation grant which will result in an annual supply of 30 governmental "interns" is announced by the National Institution of Public Affairs.

College graduates will be selected to serve for a year as assistants to high Federal officials with no pay and replacing none of the regular personnel. Under the plan they will receive the benefit of a year's experience in practical Government and college credit toward a graduate degree.

Frederick M. Davenport, former

New York Republican representative, was named general chairman of the institute to assist Otis T. Wingo Jr., its executive secretary. They will leave for the west coast tonight to make selections from 1100 candidates for 1935-36 internships. They subsequently will supervise the year's training of each "intern." Two large experiments have since February, Wingo said, have demonstrated the need for such a system. Two groups of 40 "interns" each, from 60 colleges, have taken three-month courses.

FIRST OF CORN-HOG CONTROL VOTE ALMOST EVENLY DIVIDED
Count of Early Batch of Absentee Ballots in AAA Referendum Is 95 For, 93 Against.
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. — First absentee ballots cast in connection with next Saturday's corn-hog referendum of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration were said by an authoritative source today to be almost equally divided between
"yes" and "no."
On the question whether the AAA should put into effect another production-control program in 1936,
this batch of ballots gave: Yes, 95;
no, 93. The referendum will be conducted among farmers all over the nation.
The results of the absentee ballots, it was said, became known here only because some field men of AAA misunderstood tabulation procedure instructions. Farmers absent from their home acres cast the ballots by mail. County committees, instead of retaining them, as they should have done, sent them along to Washington. The ballots are being sent back to the county committees to be tabulated in the returns Saturday night.

SETBACKS WIPE OUT EARLY GAINS

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—Moderate selling of Chicago wheat prices held firm today as setbacks that more than will appear earlier gains.

A bullish factor was word that the United States Government was studying possibility of exporting 100,000 bushels of wheat. Nothing was heard of any export business in Canadian wheat today.

Wheat closed irregularly down to $1.06 up from yesterday's finish, but it was up 98¢ at 9 a. m.; corn 14 to 1 cent; soybeans 17 to 1 cent; and clover 10 to 1 cent.

The market was showing 12 to 15 cents difference between futures and cash.

Corn opened 14¢ higher, December, at $1.09 1/4. Wheat, November, started at $1.06 1/4.

limite. Corn started at $1.06 1/4.

Can you Answer these Questions when you buy GIN?

TODAY the market is flooded with more than 2,000 different brands of gin. To guide you in making your selection, The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation gives you, in question-and-answer form, four basic standards that can be used to determine quality in a gin.

Q. Is it made from spirits distilled exclusively for gin?

A. We believe that gin is superior when the spirits have been distilled exclusively for the making of gin. The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation makes gin and nothing else. Fleischmann's Gin is made from spirits distilled exclusively for gin.

Q. Is it made from grain or molasses?

A. Fleischmann's is made from 100% domestic grain as stated on the label. This is the time-honored and more expensive source and produces a fine and desirable spirit from this standpoint.

Q. Is it an American Gin?

A. Fleischmann's Gin is the original American gin—made from an American formula for American tastes and drinking customs.

Q. Is it actually made by a distillery?

A. Fleischmann's Gin is made entirely by the Fleischmann Distillery—from spirits distilled by Fleischmann.

HEARST COMPARES NEW INCOME TAX LAWS TO HOLDUP

Treasury Puts Pistol "to Head and Says Come Across or Be Taken for Ride," He Asserts.

By the Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—Likening tax collectors to racketeers, William Randolph Hearst said today the Treasury Department "holds a gun to your head and you either come across or get taken for a ride."

Hearst, multi-millionaire publisher who has announced he will leave his native state because of income taxes, elaborated on his first statement with a scathing criticism of taxation in the United States as "intolerable and unreasonable."

"I simply cannot afford to be a resident of California as well as a resident of New York, nor can anybody else," the publisher said.

"The California (income tax) law would make me a resident if I spent over six months in California," he continued.

Three Income Taxes.
"Then I would have to pay a 15 per cent income tax in California, in addition to the lesser income tax in New York, and the extremely heavy Federal taxes. I do not see how I can afford the luxury of all this taxation."

The publisher said he planned to close his San Simeon ranch home before the end of the year, but will continue to operate his cattle business.

"The cows," he explained, "are a little more fortunate than we humans are in this respect. They can continue to enjoy the glorious climate of California without being subjected to quite confiscatory taxation, although goodness knows they are taxed plenty at that."

Hearst asserted the "methods of the tax collector are largely those of the gangster and the gun-man."

New Deal's "Stacked Deck."

His statement, given to the Associated Press in answer to inquiries about his threatened exodus, said "no one can tell how many more political parasites may have to be supported at the public expense or what tricky cards the New Deal may be expected to extract from the bottom of a stacked deck."

Answering another query, Hearst said: "No, I do not think taxation in England is at all comparable with taxation in the United States. Taxation in England was very heavy after the war, but it is being continually reduced there, while here it is being constantly increased."

"Moreover, in England you have the one set of taxes to pay, while here you have the Federal taxes, and on top of them, the State taxes, and Lord knows how many other layers of taxes, with new ones being added as fast as the irresponsible minds of the political plunder-bund can invent them."

Florida Invites Hearst: Cites Its Climate and Tax Policy.
By the Associated Press.
TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Oct. 24.—Florida today sent an invitation to William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, to move his residence from California to this State.

Gov. Dave Sholtz issued the invitation. In it was a statement of taxation, a discussion of climate, the State's financial condition and the statement that here he "may live in comfort, free from the embarrassment of confiscatory taxation."

This is the telegram that went to Hearst from Florida:

"Having noticed in the papers that you have definitely determined to change your residence from California, I am extending to you a cordial welcome to make your future home in Florida, where you can enjoy the most equable all-the-year-round climate in the world, where we have no income tax to harass those who have been so fortunate as to accumulate the means upon which to live, no sales tax to make it more difficult for the wage earner, no severance tax to handicap those who develop the natural resources of our State, and no State bonded indebtedness to be inherited as an obligation upon our newcomers."

"The State of Florida is living within its means, current bills and obligations are paid promptly when due, and no additional sources of revenue are contemplated to meet governmental requirements."

"Our mutual friend, Arthur Brisbane, is well acquainted with the situation in our State, and our invitation is extended to him also to join you in adopting the State of Florida as a new home, where you both will find a hearty welcome and may live in comfort, free from the embarrassment of confiscatory taxation."

AUTO FATALITIES DECREASED 10 PER CENT IN SEPTEMBER

Reductions Also Reported for Five Other Months of Present Year.

By the Associated Press.
HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 24.—September, safety month in many states by proclamation, was disclosed today in figures compiled by the Travelers Insurance Co. as having a record of 3100 automobile fatalities, a reduction of 10 per cent over the similar period a year ago.

The company said that during the first nine months of 1935 decreases in motor accident deaths were reported for January, April, May, June and July in addition to September. The improvement shown during September was exceeded in percentage only by the drop in fatalities during January.

Connecticut headed the list of states reporting percentage decreases with a total of 57.8 under the same month's record of deaths last year.

The company estimates the casualty toll for the first 10 months of this year will be approximately 28,100. Similarly it forecasts on this same basis that the total for the year will be 35,200 as against 36,000 last year.

Gov. Dave Sholtz issued the invitation. In it was a statement of taxation, a discussion of climate, the State's financial condition and the statement that here he "may live in comfort, free from the embarrassment of confiscatory taxation."

This is the telegram that went to Hearst from Florida:

"Having noticed in the papers that you have definitely determined to change your residence from California, I am extending to you a cordial welcome to make your future home in Florida, where you can enjoy the most equable all-the-year-round climate in the world, where we have no income tax to harass those who have been so fortunate as to accumulate the means upon which to live, no sales tax to make it more difficult for the wage earner, no severance tax to handicap those who develop the natural resources of our State, and no State bonded indebtedness to be inherited as an obligation upon our newcomers."

"The State of Florida is living within its means, current bills and obligations are paid promptly when due, and no additional sources of revenue are contemplated to meet governmental requirements."

"Our mutual friend, Arthur Brisbane, is well acquainted with the situation in our State, and our invitation is extended to him also to join you in adopting the State of Florida as a new home, where you both will find a hearty welcome and may live in comfort, free from the embarrassment of confiscatory taxation."

AUTO FATALITIES DECREASED 10 PER CENT IN SEPTEMBER

Reductions Also Reported for Five Other Months of Present Year.

By the Associated Press.
HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 24.—September, safety month in many states by proclamation, was disclosed today in figures compiled by the Travelers Insurance Co. as having a record of 3100 automobile fatalities, a reduction of 10 per cent over the similar period a year ago.

The company said that during the first nine months of 1935 decreases in motor accident deaths were reported for January, April, May, June and July in addition to September. The improvement shown during September was exceeded in percentage only by the drop in fatalities during January.

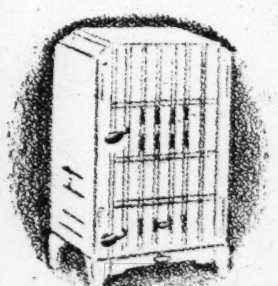

Connecticut headed the list of states reporting percentage decreases with a total of 57.8 under the same month's record of deaths last year.

The company estimates the casualty toll for the first 10 months of this year will be approximately 28,100. Similarly it forecasts on this same basis that the total for the year will be 35,200 as against 36,000 last year.

It looks like peace in Europe. England has heard from Laval that France has no notion whatever of getting into a war over Ethiopia. She may need her strength for Germany and is saving it. Gov. Landon of Kansas, possessing support that may make him the Republican nominee for President, says that the way to escape depression is to cut down Government cost through elimination of economic waste and raising the level of efficiency.

Gov. Landon, wise person, does not suggest "mere cutting down," but rather "getting more out of the tax dollar by elimination of dead wood and waste."

Senator Norris of Nebraska intimates that he will not run for reelection, which is bad news. It is a good thing to have in the Senate a man who says what he thinks, bluntly and sincerely, even though he may be wrong occasionally. Age is no excuse. Senator Borah tells a friend "this country is largely Republican. Mr. Roosevelt could not have been elected without Republican votes. He cannot be re-elected without Republican votes."

If Republicans intend to do something, they should consider seriously the work of selecting a candidate, uniting on somebody who can get back the Republican votes and bring over some Democrats. Talking back and forth to each other like whippoorwills will not produce results. They must talk to the people and talk HARD.

He felt "greatly honored," but feared that if his treatment proved unsuccessful that might be "construed as connected with the fact that he is a Jew."

Prof. Neumann treated the Prince of Wales for throat trouble. No Jewish complication there.

The request for Prof. Neumann's services reminds you of Europe's middle ages, when ordinary Christians were forbidden to let Jewish doctors treat them, while others high in power kept Jewish doctors in their own employ for their own safety. England would not willingly have a war all to herself, or let anybody drop a war into her lap. Haile Selassie probably will be told how much he may keep. Some good excuse will be invented. Mussolini will have what is called "peace with honor," which means some new piece of territory.

Memories of Home Town Experiences

Few Realized They Were Living Through a Changing Order.

By Elsie Robinson

REMEMBER the rainwater barrel that stood beneath the kitchen eaves, with the wrigglers in it in summer, and the blue bush besides it, heavy with heart-shaped leaves?

And the sound of the rain drumming on the attic roof — and the wail of the wind through the old pine — and you, snug in your slippers, and deeper under the patch — work quilts? Playing, perhaps, that you were in a pirate den... or imagining you were Amy or Joe in "Little Women."

And the smell of warm, new bread on baking day... or the clove pinks in a spiced meat beside the sizzling brick walk?

Remember? How can you forget? It's part of you, if you're over 30, isn't it? Woven so tight into the set of your bones, tangled so deeply in the throbs of your blood, that nothing in life can ever pull it apart. Even yet, the prickly warmth of an April day will set you scratching at the winter flannels you haven't worn — for how many years? — or the quiet dusk will bring your eyes with tears at the thought of your mother's voice, calling you in from play, with the lamp light hanging on a golden square behind her dear, blurred face!

Old Home Town — what wouldn't you give to go back to it again, if only for an hour? And some day, you promise yourself, you will.

But of course you won't. For Old Home Town doesn't exist any more. The Chain Stores and the Gas Stations, Motor Order Carriers and Automobiles have wiped it off the map. And left an ache, for thousands of us, which nothing can ever heal.

Because she, too, knows that ache, Rose Wilbur Lane has gathered it all together — all the old sounds, sights and smells, the simple things we said and did so casually, which now seem so strange and significant — she has gathered them all together, as one we gathered rose petals and spices for our potpourri jars, and made them into a book called "OLD HOME TOWN."

And — laugh if you will — here's betting you read it as I did, nibbling by nibble, as we used to eat our cherished scraps of wedding cake, taking a crumb, then putting the rest hastily away lest it all be finished too soon.

For these aren't just words. This is Life — American Life in its amazing making, as we actually lived it. And something more — something we couldn't get as we lived it — the meaning of it all.

For we never dreamed we were watching history — did we? — as we ran up Town on our errands. "Don't you dare go hanging around Miller's, Ernestine, nor let me hear of you peeping into the Barber Shop again!" Never realized we were seeing the passing of the Old Order — watching the advent of a new and incredible era. An era when a woman could actually go into Business with her own money, where a Lady might take an Over-night Journey alone, and even stay in the same hotel with the man she knew, without being branded as a Fallen Woman — as they did poor Mrs. Sims!

Lamp-lit streets shaded by spreading elms... smells of frying doughnuts... sound of the lawn mower... Easter Leghorns hais, floppy with wreaths of pink cotton roses... hay rides and corn husking... groups of straw-chewing men, guffawing in front of the lively stable as the wind swirls petticoats about embarrassed ankles... there it all is, in its prime parade. And through it all — the growing restlessness, the rising consciousness that maybe a woman didn't need to be a hopeless Old Maid at 26, a doddering dowager at 38, the helpless victim of male desire or male idealism all the days of her life.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a girl 14 years old. I play with two girls and boys that are my age. We play out together at night and get home at 10 o'clock. Now, Mrs. Carr, do you think there is anything wrong about that? Don't you think I am old enough to go to what I want?

I have a brother who works, and another packs his lunch every day. She will not pack mine. She says I get enough money to pay for my lunch. If I want to go to the movies I have to take money out of my allowance. Do you think it is right?

I am going to a Halloween party, at which we have to wear costumes. I haven't got any and I don't know how to pay much for one. Can you suggest anything?

C. S.

Will start right at the beginning. No, I do not think you are old enough to do anything you please. Because you have not the judgment to know what is the right thing to do. "Frivolous" is somewhat indefinite, very much depends upon where you play and the kind of diversion you choose. And then you probably waste time which you should spend in school or some kind of study. "Amusement" is all right in its place, and when it does not occupy time that should be spent otherwise. Then, of course, much depends upon who your playmates are. Leave a goodly share of the solution necessary in these matters to your mother.

Generally, the household tasks are done by the women of the family. Many men can and do help, but I should say that your mother knows your needs and thinks you should help in your expenditures.

Wear a sheet — tie around the waist with a dark cord — a pillow slip with place for eyes and nose cut out and painted with black.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

ALL a girl in her teens who is very nervous. My nervousness comes in spells and sometimes I worry intensely. At such times life is a burden, as my head feels tired and I don't care to see anybody or anywhere.

Wash air and sunshine help me a great deal, but now winter is coming on and I don't think I can be outdoors so much. Do you think I look lessons on my banjo or guitar the boys it would be different? I am aware of no physical disorder except sometimes a tired feeling from a waste of nervous energy. Anyway, I don't think a physician would make one a physical invalid. I don't have any reason to worry about the than average girl — a kind family and all.

C.

Ya I think a physical disorder could make one temperamental. But the out-of-doors and determined self-control with an unselfish interest in others will go far toward conquering this restlessness. Suppose you do less analyzing of yourself and hunt hard for new activities. But, first of all, I would advise you to go to a good doctor and see if any little physical trouble may need adjusting.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

HAVE in my possession 24 Indian head pennies, ranging in date from 1807 to 1907. Would you kindly enlighten me as to their value or tell me to whom I can go for such information?

Story Telling One of Oldest Ways to Teach

Children Are Most Easily Impressed by Moral in Anecdote.

By Angelo Patri

MANY children, and not always the youngest, confuse their own ability with the ability of those who help them. I mean that many children credit themselves for what others do. It's a natural mistake. They are fed and clothed and sheltered. They are helped to a place in the world by their friends and relatives. They are unconscious of all that is being done, and see only themselves. They point with pride to their place of power, saying: "See what I have done."

This is an unhealthy state of mind. A child should have capacity for self-criticism. He must know himself and his limitations if he is to develop wholesomely. When you find such a child, tell him that story about the kid on the roof. I remember reading it in Latin many years ago.

Say to him: "Once upon a time there was a little kid, so small and so helpless that the mother goat set him on the roof to keep him out of danger. He soon discovered that he was safe from harm, and he took advantage of this to annoy the passers-by. He made sudden dashes as though to leap upon them. When they showed signs of anger he bleated with joy.

"I am the king," he cried. "I am the king. All who pass must look up to me."

"A wolf passing by heard him and snarled behind his teeth: 'You — you are a king?' It is the roof upon which you sit that is king. Come down off that roof for a minute and you will soon see who is king."

You know yourself how it hurts to have someone place a blunt finger on your sore spot. You resent it heartily, although you know inwardly you are at fault. The hurt to your pride ripples long after you have forgotten the cause. Somewhere, I think, is the fault in sheer defiance. Children are very much like us in that respect.

But a story — that's different. When the blustering one squirms and says, "That's a silly story, who ever heard of a kid bounding up to a wolf?" smile and keep still. That kid will do his work. The fact that you have a lot of sympathy for the kid helps. One always sympathizes with the weak.

Story telling is one of the oldest and best ways to teach children, and the most attractive stories are stories with a moral. Children do like a moral, provided you don't rub their noses into it. They like to know definitely that this is wrong and this is right. They want the hero rewarded and the villain punished. No fine shades of conduct for them. Black is black and white is white. That is a good starting point.

And that is why I say, when in trouble remember the fables. They are the folklore of a people. They are good literature and good morality. They speak in the voice that childhood understands, the voice of sincerity and truth. Told over and over they become pass words of behavior.

shall I bring him up with me while I get my wraps together?

As an extra big date of mine is coming soon, I hope to see your answer an early reply in the paper.

UPSTAIRS GIRL.

Since you have no place to invite a guest, your dates probably understand beforehand that you are to go out somewhere. And so, I see no objection to your being ready, with your wraps on your arm or already on, when your friend appears. These boys probably understand the circumstances.

Sometimes, when girls are obliged to live independently, in this way, they furnish their room as a living room, with lounge, instead of bed, and ask their young friends up. It isn't necessary, perhaps, but wise, to leave the door open when callers come, and provide a pretty screen partly to shut off the gaze of curiosity lookers.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

WILL you please help us out? We wish to give our adviser a school present, and we appreciate her kindness toward us. She is middle-aged but youthful-looking woman. Will you please print several suggestions for us.

If you wish to give her something for her room or apartment, and know that she has particular pride in her furnishings, a lamp (these can be had in a great range of prices), a desk set, a pretty dressing table, stool or chair, a cover for her telephone directory, a book shelf or a dressing table set. Mark Twain's Visits to St. Louis Famous Humorist Came to 'The Big City' as a Boy and Returned at Intervals During Life — Waterfront Held His Interest.

By Cyril Clemens

As a boy in Hannibal, Samuel Clemens always heard St. Louis spoken of as the "Big City." He greatly envied the fortunate citizens of Hannibal who could board a steamer and within less than a day reach the crowded wharves of the metropolis. One day as a small boy he smuggled himself aboard a river boat tied up at Hannibal, hiding somewhere on the top deck. No sooner had the boat started for St. Louis, than a fierce rain-storm broke out and little Sam was obliged to go into the pilot house for protection against the elements. He was put off the boat at the next stop and sent home in ignominy.

Sam's brief school days ended when he was 12 years old. Then he became an apprentice to a Hannibal printer and afterwards to his brother who bought a local paper when Sam was 15 years old. A few years later the brothers quarreled, whereupon Sam got his mother's permission to go down to the Great City, and visit his sister who had married a St. Louis merchant, Samuel E. Moffett.

For several days after reaching the town, Sam could do nothing but wander around looking at the sights — everything was new, strange, and delightful to the boy who had been brought up in the backwoods of Northern Missouri. He had thoroughly sated his curiosity, and looked at every public building and monument that the city could boast. Sam found a job on the St. Louis Evening News. He stayed only a few months, until such time as he could save up enough money to fulfill his second great ambition — to go to New York. East the boy stayed for some 15 months, dividing his time between New York, Philadelphia and Washington. Tiring of the East, Sam returned to St. Louis and the St. Louis Evening News.

His second stay was an important period in Clemens' life. He lodged and boarded with a family named Pavey, formerly of Hannibal, rooming with Frank E. Burroughs, an apprentice to a chairmaker who spent all his spare moments in reading such classic authors as Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer-Lytton. This young man had a genuine appreciation for literature and Clemens learned much from him.

After staying a few more months in St. Louis, Sam joined his brother who was conducting a paper at Keokuk, Ia. But there he heard much talk about how easy it was to become a millionaire overnight in the gold fields of Peru. He soon got the fever and winding up his samite affairs, started down the Mississippi River. He got no further than New Orleans, where he discovered that no boat was sailing for Peru for months, and moreover, his money had given out. One day while walking along the levee with his hands stuck deep in his pockets he fell in with a Capt. Bixby on whose Tomorrow night at Jefferson Memorial, the Missouri Historical Society will formally open a Mark Twain exhibit which has been assembled as part of the centennial celebration for the famous Missouri author. The exhibit consists of letters written by Mark Twain and of tributes paid to his genius by noted living authors. The accompanying article, written by Cyril Clemens of Kirkwood, whose father was Mark Twain's "favorite cousin," shows how the great writer's career was shaped by contacts with early St. Louis.

boat he became a cub pilot in April, 1857. While he was on the river both as cub and full fledged pilot, he made St. Louis his headquarters. Whenever the boat lay over he stayed with his sister Pamela.

Clemens would have liked to have followed the river the rest of his days but with the coming on of the Civil War, all commerce was suspended, and he lost his job. After spending a few months with the Confederate army in Northern Missouri, "until I was completely incapacitated," he tells us, "from fatigue brought on by excessive retreating," he then went West where he remained for some five years following the pursuits of gold and silver miner, reporter, correspondent, lecturer and traveler. Then he took ship to New York via Panama, and it was while visiting his mother and sister in St. Louis that he first read an account of the projected pleasure excursion of the Quaker City to the Holy Land. He read further that they were in need of a correspondent to take an account of the expedition. Upon his return to America, Clemens married and settled down in Hartford. Some 15 or 20 years later he was seized with an overwhelming nostalgia to see the great river again, on which he had spent so many pleasant and laborious hours.

So in 1881, he came back to St. Louis again, and hoped to have a week of sightseeing in the great Mississippi city, but was disappointed to find that the boat was starting the next day. They put up at the old Southern Hotel. "A good hotel, and we could have had a comfortable time there. It is large and well conducted, and its decorations do not make one cry, as do those of the vast Palmer House in Chicago. True, the billiard tables were of the old Slurrian Period, and the cues and balls of the post-Phoenician; but there was a refreshment in this, not discomfort, for there are rest and healing in the contemplation of antiquities."

Clemens found extremely few river men in the lobby and billiard room of the hotel as compared with those of days when he himself was on the river. When he went up to his bedroom in his hotel he found his secretary in tears. "What is a person to do when he wants a drink of water? Drink this slush!" "Can't you drink it?" asked Mark Twain.

"I could if I had some other water to wash it with!"

"Here was a thing," commented Mark Twain, "that had not affected the water's mulatto complexion in the least; a score of centuries would score no better land from the water as easy as Genesis, and then you will find them both good; the one good to eat, the other good to drink."

The only morning that he was in the city, he took a ride around St. Louis. He knew there were a great many changes, yet the city looked the same because, "in St. Louis, as in London and Pittsburgh, you can't persuade a new thing to look new; the coal smoke turns it into an antiquity the moment you take your hand off it."

Clemens thought, however, the smoke had abated somewhat from the old days when the smoke used to bank itself in a dense black canopy over the town, and hide the sky from view. This smoke is very much thinner now; still, there is a sufficiency of smoke here, I think."

The park system of St. Louis greatly impressed the visitor, "there was another change — Forest Park. This was new to me. It is beautiful and very extensive, and has the excellent merit of having made mainly by nature. There are other parks, and fine ones, notably Tower Grove Park and the Botanical Gardens; for St. Louis interested itself in such improvements at an earlier date than did most of our cities."

But where Clemens saw the really important changes, of course, was on the levee. In his day, it was covered with river boats some places three or four deep for miles after mile. The levee formerly was the busiest spot of the whole city. The arrival and departure of the steamboats formerly made a most exciting and stirring scene. At the time of his revisit there were only "half a dozen sound asleep steamboats whence I used to see a solid mile of wide-awake ones!" This was melancholy, this was woe — half a dozen lifeless steamboats, a mile of empty wharves, a Negro fatigued with whiskey, stretched asleep in a wide and soundless vacancy, where the serried hosts of commerce used to contend."

But at the time of his revisit Clemens found the whole river front absolutely deserted.

"The pavements along the river front were bad; the sidewalks were rather out of repair, there was a rich abundance of mud. All this was familiar and satisfying; but the ancient armies of drays and struggling throngs of men were no more."

The humorist made a number of trips to St. Louis after this visit but his next stay of any length was not until 1902. He went to Columbia, Mo., where a degree was conferred upon him by the University of Missouri. He then came to visit his father and soon found himself busy christening a steamboat named after him and unveiling a tablet at the home of Eugene Flad.

The day Mark Twain left St. Louis, a Negro man named Sambo was sent down ahead with the ticket to check the trunk at the station. On the way down he met some of his cronies who invited him into a tavern, where amidst the fumes of a delectable African punch he forgot all about the train, the ticket and the trunk. So when Mark Twain and my father arrived at the station they found a large crowd of friends and admirers waiting to bid farewell to the distinguished visitor, but they could find no Sambo high or low.

Poor Mark did not have time even to say good-bye to his friends because he was frantically pacing the platform and looking with all his eyes for the appearance of Sambo. But that gentleman did not put in his dusky appearance and my father was obliged to lend his cousin the money to purchase a new ticket. And amidst the cheers of the crowd which was rapidly growing larger and larger, he jumped on the train just as it was pulling out of the station.

Problems of Social Usage For Weddings

Bride May Be Escorted by Brother When Father Declines.

By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post:

MY father, although perfectly fit and able, is not inclined to participate actively in my wedding, and he would prefer not to walk down the aisle with me. Do I walk by myself or may I be escorted by a brother?

Answer: Of course, your brother may walk with you. Your father can still give you in marriage (if this is part of the ritual of your church) by going forward the few steps necessary, or even from his place in the front pew.

Dear Mrs. Post: I've just received my wedding invitations, which should go out soon, and the engraver made the mistake of including afternoon following the word Saturday. Is this too incorrect to send?

Answer: There is no possible objection to the insertion of "afternoon." The only reason why it is omitted is that it isn't necessary. By all means send out the invitations as they are, and don't give the extra word a moment's thought. Had the engraver added Miss before your name, then that would be worth worrying about.

Dear Mrs. Post: My mother has been out of mourning for eight years and yet she insists upon wearing black lace to my wedding. Isn't this bad taste?

Answer: Black is not very cheerful to wear at a wedding, especially when worn by the bride's mother. However, lace is less sombre than any other material, and if your mother adds color in either flowers or trimming, or both, it should be all right.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am almost 40 and getting married for the first time. Does my age make it unsuitable for the announcements to be in my parents' names? If not, does the fact that I live miles away from their home make any difference?

Answer: Certainly not — to both questions.

Dear Mrs. Post: My fiancé would like to buy his best man a slightly different gift than those which he has for his ushers. I really don't think this is very kind, and perhaps not even proper, but I thought I'd better keep quiet about it until I had your opinion.

Answer: The gift to the best man is usually similar, but seldom a duplicate of those given to the ushers. It is often more valuable but it need not be, and it should not be too conspicuously finer! The same difference is often made between the bride's gift to her maid of honor and those to her bridesmaids.

One cake cream cheese, sweet cream, one sprig parsley, one teaspoon chives, one egg yolk, one yolk hard-boiled egg, one-quarter cup pecans. Blend enough cream into the cheese to make a stiff paste. Divide into four portions. To one add minced parsley and chives, to another add chopped pimento, to the third add the yolk of hard-boiled egg and to the fourth the chopped pecans. Mold into tiny balls and serve one or more of each on a mound of lettuce. Cover with French dressing.

"He seized Tyler's lapel and cried: 'They've got him, too!' he cried. Tears stood out on his eyes. 'He—he's given himself in my place,' he said. 'You phoned that number?' Tyler asked. 'Of course,' Gordon said. 'It's a cigar store on Fordham road. Gaudio undoubtedly communicated with him there. And Dave offered himself as a possible ready-made replacement.' 'The young fool,' said Tyler explosively. Then, at the look in Gordon's eyes, he checked himself, took the man's arm, gently. 'But he's a gallant fool,' he said. *

NAT jumped to his feet, flung his half-smoked cigarette into the fireplace. 'To think that that young fellow—' he said. 'What he did took courage, Mr. Tyler. The highest sort of courage. I'll grant it was foolish but—' 'Possibly not so foolish,' said Tyler. 'Nat stared at him. 'What do you mean?' he demanded. 'This thing,' said Tyler. 'Suppose that David was conspiring with Gaudio? Suppose he is afraid of us? Suspicious? Suppose he placed that ad in the paper—as a neat little alibi? For other words, suppose he disappeared—conveniently—perhaps to go to Gaudio, pretend he was a prisoner—after making a hero of himself by that advertisement.' 'He's now dropped.' 'He knows his father will deliver himself to Gaudio,' Tyler went on grimly. 'And that Gaudio—will kill him! If Helene or Carletta know too much—they'll be killed, too. But David can make a miracle out of this. Nobody can pin anything on him then. And he's on top of the world, with every cent of Gordon's fortune!' 'Well I'll be darned!' said Nat.

Abruptly Ruth stopped. 'Someone is waiting—waiting,' she whispered. 'Someone who has been waiting a long time. His mind is filled with bitter triumph. He is biding his time—when he knows will soon come. He is very patient. He knows that he has won.' 'Gaudio!' said Nat. Tyler nodded him to keep silent, touched Ruth's arm gently. 'Ruth,' he said, 'never mind him. We know about him. Try to get through—to the others! Try to get the name!' The girl nodded, drew the bow over the strings. She began to play, not softly, as she had done, but a tempestuous tone, passionate, intense. She hesitated, faltered, almost stopped. Her father leaned close to her. She continued with obstinate force. The music swelled. She drew the bow sharply across the strings, held it for a moment, dropped the bow. Her face lighted up. 'The name is Jim Gabriel.' 'The name is Jim Gabriel,' Tyler gave an exclamation, plunging his hand into his pocket, drew out a folded sheet of paper, stared at it. 'Jim Gabriel!' said Nat. 'Ever hear of him?' Tyler glanced up from the paper. 'I have heard him.' 'He was one of half a dozen men Commissioner Kilrane named to Gordon and me at headquarters the other day, a known racketeer the police have never been able to pin anything on. A pencil, Nat.' Tyler scribbled busily for a moment or two, once or twice using the eraser. Nat watched him curiously. Then Tyler checked, rose, holding out the paper. 'That's it,' said Helene's note. His eyes went to its second paragraph. 'Just imagine . . . My God . . . and bring ransom immediately . . . enough! . . . love'

'I've wanted to get that rat for years,' he said. 'I'll send out a confidential message. We'll pick up his trail. I'll phone you the minute we get him.' 'The hour dragged slowly. Finally, in the late afternoon, Kilrane phoned. He was grimly jubilant. 'We've found him,' he said. 'He's at the Palm Gardens, a cafe he owns. I'll get him. I'll trace him through one of our men, the one named Flaherty. Gabriel invited him up to his private apartment—last night to have a drink! How's that for nerve?' 'If I'm any judge, this fellow has plenty of that,' said Tyler. 'Yeh,' said Kilrane. 'Now, here's the situation: Flaherty got a good look at the layout there. Gabriel lives in a swell apartment in the front of the building. He's a regular taurant. He's got all kinds of tricks, locks on his doors. Probably couldn't withstand quite a siege. So we've got to be careful. There are three other rooms on that second floor. My hunch is the two women and the young fellow are in them. Gabriel hasn't been out of the building since last night. We're going to close in on him tonight. Meet me at the Westchester police station at 9. I'll be there. I'll get the man for you. Pick it up out in the main road for about 8:15. Kayo?' 'Okay,' said Tyler, and hung up. He picked up the phone again and called Nelson. When the man arrived, Tyler told him the whole story, then explained what had happened. 'Now, here's the idea, Nelson: Not a word about Collins or Gabriel, or any of this, to a soul. Detail another trusted man to help me. I'll get the man out of the place like a hawk. If anybody tries to leave, let him go, but have him—or her, followed. That means everybody!' (Continued Tomorrow.)

Christopher Crow Calls Jelly Bear As First Speaker

By Mary Graham Bonner

"Caw, caw, caw, no more nonsense," cawed Christopher Columbus Crow. "I shall be the crow chairman of this meeting."

"How can you be the crow chairman of a meeting?" cackled the Notch, the rooster, in his practical fashion. "You're not a man and you can't be a chairman. A chairman would have to be a man who could take the most important chair and lead the others in discussion. I'll be a rock rooster."

"In other words I'll perch on top of a rock and take charge."

"It seems to me," growled Jelly Bear, "that you're all forgetting that we started this meeting."

"We're not forgetting that," said Christopher, "but you weren't sitting anywhere. Considering that merely suggested—before the Notch had put in his roosterish oar—that I take charge so there would be no more interruptions I think we could follow that idea."

"Bow-wow-wow, I agree with that. Do let's get started. Otherwise I'll have to go down for Willy Nilly."

"Oh no, oh no, we can't have Willy Nilly at this meeting. It's about him," growled Jelly Bear. "But I'll agree to let Christopher take charge."

They all finally agreed, so Christopher Columbus Crow stood on top of a big rock outside the bear cave and cawed:

"Fuddle Muddlers! I am glad to see you all here today. It is a lovely day. And now, without further nonsense, the first speaker at this meeting will be Jelly Bear. He will tell us what he has in his bear mind besides the thought of food."

Happy Second Marriages
A Pictorial College Story

Let's EXPLORE Your MIND

By ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, D. Sc.

See Whether His Opinions Agree With Your Own

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These an- are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

"When I was a boy we often re- marked with the first ice. Why we skate better than we did last year. And the same was true when we went in for our first swim—just as we were going out. We were en- tirely correct. Experiments since then have shown that when you practice the piano, a language, or any skill, you gain a point where more prac- tice does no good. However, if you either quit entirely or keep on there again comes a time when all at once you reap the rewards of your practice. Apparently the nervous system has been unconsciously organizing your previous efforts."

"In an able study of 'Migratory Divorce,' that is, going to other states and counties to secure di- vorce—by Ernest R. Groves, scolo- gist, he thinks the fact that people who marry after divorce are about as happy as the average, is quite a good deal due to the fact that the first mar- riage has taught them a good deal. He points out that being older and hav- ing greater emotional maturity are fac- tors. Of course, also both these factors may enable them to choose mates more wisely."

3.—That scholarly and expert ma- gician, John Mulholland, who has studied magic all over the world, points out in his fascinating book, 'The Story of Magic,' that magic was formerly used chiefly by the medicine men and priests of primitive peoples in order to convince the ignorant of their

"power," and that they were in league with the spirits. Nowadays, of course, the object of magic is merely to enter- tain and mystify. Children like it for its mystery and we like it because of the child that, thank heaven, still lives in us."

1. WILLIAM JAMES, PSYCHOLOGIST, SAID: 'WE LEARN TO SKATE IN SUMMER AND TO SWIM IN WINTER.' PSYCHOLOGY? YES OR NO

2. WHEN MARRIED PEOPLE ARE HAPPY IN THEIR MARRIAGES, IS IT ENTIRELY DUE TO THE FACT THEY ARE BETTER MATED? YES OR NO

3. THAT SCHOLARLY AND EXPERT MAGICIAN, JOHN MULHOLLAND, WHO HAS STUDIED MAGIC ALL OVER THE WORLD, POINTS OUT THAT BEING OLDER AND HAVING GREATER EMOTIONAL MATURITY ARE FACTORS. OF COURSE, ALSO BOTH THESE FACTORS MAY ENABLE THEM TO CHOOSE MATES MORE WISELY.

Will There Be Sanction Chiselers?

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

THE League of Nations has sent us its new catalogue in case we want to order anything. American tourists are advised to be neutral. Don't slap a General on the whiskers if he has his army with him. We must stay out of this one. Our books show we cannot afford to win another war. The League is trying to stop this war by applying sanctions. A sanction is a diplomatic mustard plaster that brings a boil to a head and then tips its hat. A sanction is like a fellow who can do as well on the dole as he can on a job. Sometimes it works and sometimes it doesn't. This is the first time that anybody has tried sanctions. And if a sanction is anything like a peace treaty we had better let this war stop itself.

ITALIANS CAPTURE TWO MORE TOWNS IN ADVANCE ON SOUTHERN FRONT

Occupation of Callafo and Geledi, Following Fall of Dagnerrei, Announced—Villages on the Path to Harar.

ADDITIONAL TRIBAL CHIEFS SURRENDER

Air Forces Go Far Ahead on Reconnaissance Flights and Have "Effectively Bombed Various Military Objectives."

By the Associated Press. ROME, Oct. 23.—Italy's Somali army was said today to be moving forward up the Webbe Shil valley in the direction of Harar, Ethiopia.

An official communiqué announced the capture of two additional villages in the Scialevi region, Callafo and Geledi, taken Oct. 20 and 21 following the fall of Dagnerrei.

The aviation reconnaissance continues, it was said, as far as Sasa Banch, 80 miles southwest of British Somaliland in the Ogaden sector, and Magalo in the Juba sector.

"On the Somali front," the announcement said, "the action continues in the Scialevi sector."

"After the capture of the fortified position at Dagnerrei, the advance pursued along the river for the occupation of the various villages along its banks."

"Meanwhile, a group of Dubat (native Somali troops) with a swift maneuver occupied the village of Callafo, an important center in the Scialevi region, Oct. 20 (Callafo, although not shown on maps, apparently is near Mustahil an important center in Ogaden Province)."

"Numerous tribal chiefs hastened to present themselves at Callafo make acts of submission, and join the army. Five hundred rifles were captured."

"Olo Dinle, the Sultan of Scialevi, who has capitulated to us, continuing a flanking action with his armed followers. On Oct. 21 they participated in a successful engagement near the village of Geledi, which was occupied."

"Our aviation forces have executed frequent reconnaissance flights in the Ogaden sector as far as Sasa Banch and in the Juba sector as far as Magalo. (Magalo is only 225 miles southeast of Addis Ababa.)"

"They effectively bombed various military objectives."

"There is nothing new in the Eritrean sector except the movement of our advance guards, which is proceeding with the final occupation of the Tigre territory and is welcomed with popular enthusiasm."

Italian Flyers Drop 200 Bombs on Town of Gabardarre

By Reuters Agency. HARAR, Ethiopia, Oct. 23.—Four Italian planes attacked Gabardarre today, dropping more than 200 bombs. Seven Ethiopian soldiers were wounded in the assault, but none was killed.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.) HARAR, Ethiopia, Oct. 23.—Twelve thousand well-equipped Ethiopian infantry, cavalry and anti-aircraft troops, the main body of the Harar regulars, started for the southern front today after being reviewed by Ras Nasibu, who will command them in battle against the Italians.

Led by 2000 heavily-laden camels, the soldiers moved southward in American-made motor trucks toward the Fascist forces led by Gen. Rodolfo Graziani.

The Abuna, or Bishop of Ethiopia's Coptic Christian Church, blessed the colors and cathedral priests gave the soldiers absolution.

Galla women, weeping, singing, shrieking and indulging in lamentations, lent a true Oriental touch to the scene—the most colorful ever witnessed in the only walled city of Emperor Haile Selassie's empire.

Ras Nasibu, Governor of Harar and a principal Ethiopian commander in the south, told the Associated Press that Jijiga, 50 miles to the east, would be one of the main points of defense on the southeastern front.

The chieftain, who appeared to have aged considerably under the stress of the war since this correspondent last saw him a month ago, expressed confidence that he
